The maxim in full is Stare decisis et non quia movere.

[a] Stare decisis is not a rule of order, but a rule affecting the practical administration of justice. Mead v. McGraw, 19 Ohio St. 55, 62.

[b] The rule of stare decisis means in general that, when a point has been once settled by judicial decision, it forms a precedent for the guidance of courts in similar cases. It expresses the principle upon which rests the authority of judicial decisions as precedents in subsequent litigations, and adherence to it is necessary to preserve the certainty, stability and symmetry of our jurisprudence. Menge v. The Madrid, 40 Fed. 677.

[c] Stare decisis is a name given to the doctrine that, when the court has once laid down a principle of law as applicable to a certain state of facts, are alike in principle,<sup>2</sup> and also in the elemental facts upon which the decision rests,<sup>3</sup> and not of cases wherein the facts are essentially different.<sup>4</sup>

The doctrine is applied, as a general rule, only to decisions of a court having final jurisdiction of the questions involved,<sup>5</sup> and, while the decisions of intermediate appellate courts may sometimes be regarded as precedents when there are none to the contrary by a higher court,<sup>6</sup> the rule does not apply with full force to such decisions,<sup>7</sup> and in some jurisdictions, by statute, has no application whatever.<sup>8</sup> The decisions it will adhere to that principle, and apply it to all future cases where the facts are substantially the same. Moore v. Albany, 98 N. Y. 396.

[a] The rulings of courts must be considered always in reference to the subjectmatter of litigation and the attitude of parties in relation to the point under discussion, and it is wrong to use as an illustration or authority a judicial ruling which was applied to a different state of things. Gaines v. Hennen, 24 How. (U. S.) 553, 566, 16 L. ed. 770.

4. Brooks v. Marbury, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 78, 91, 6 L. ed. 423.

[a] In another and different case, general principles, which are perfectly sound expressions of the law under the facts of a particular case, may be wholly inapplicable. Parsons v. Dist. of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 51, 18 Sup. Ct. 521, 42 L. ed. 943.

8. Giesecke v. Cullerton, 280 Ill. 510, 117 N. E. 777.

[a] Merely Persuasive.—Such opinion has, however, a certain persuasive of district and other inferior courts are not within the rule,<sup>9</sup> and decisions, opinions, rules and provisions are not strictly precedents when rendered or made by a legislature,<sup>10</sup> executive departments of the government,<sup>11</sup> military tribunals,<sup>12</sup> commissions,<sup>13</sup> or an attorney general.<sup>14</sup>

The reasons generally advanced for the necessity of the rule of stare decisis are that it is indispensable to the due administration of justice,<sup>15</sup> to preserve settled rules,<sup>16</sup> to avoid confusion,<sup>17</sup> and to establish uniformity, certainty and stability in the law,<sup>18</sup> as illustrated by judicial construction and interpretation of statutes,<sup>19</sup> or rules of common force or authority which is respected by other courts. Glescock v. Callerton, 180 Ill. 510, 117 N. E. 777.

ion does not imply approval of everything contained in the opinion of the court below.<sup>37</sup>

5. Decisions by Divided Court.—The fact that the decision of a court of last resort is rendered by a divided court does not make the case any the less a precedent,<sup>38</sup> but when an affirmance results from an equal division of the court, the decision is not a binding authority for the determination of other cases.<sup>39</sup>

6. Decisions or Opinions Concurred in.—Opinions concurred in by other judges are deemed to be their own and the principles established thereby are the settled law of the court,<sup>40</sup> and this is true of a general concurrence when no specific grounds therefor are stated.<sup>41</sup> But the doctrine of stare decisis does not apply to the reasons, grounds, or principles stated in an opinion when a majority of the court concur merely in the result.<sup>42</sup>

7. Decisions Procured by Collusion.—The fact that a decision was procured by collusion should not, it seems, affect its force as a precedent,<sup>43</sup> particularly where it was rendered only after an intervention by other interested persons who were not parties to the alleged collusion.<sup>44</sup> But it has been held that an affirmance by consent is not an adjudication binding as a precedent.<sup>45</sup>

8. Contrary Decisions.—While the fact that the latest decision of a court is opposed to its previous rulings may influence that court to overrule such decision,<sup>46</sup> yet when the supreme court has rendered contrary decisions on any question, the lower courts must follow its last expression on the subject,<sup>47</sup> and cannot follow a contrary decision by an intermediate court of appeals.<sup>48</sup> Where controlling decisions of intermediate appellate courts are contrary, an inferior court should follow the decision of the court of appeals of its own district.<sup>49</sup> Where coordinate appellate courts render contrary decisions on the same question, each should follow its own decision, unless convinced that it is wrong, until a higher court renders a controlling decision on the matter.<sup>50</sup> Conflict between state and federal decisions are discussed elsewhere.<sup>51</sup>

9. Irregular Proceedings.—A decision at an irregular proceed-in the result, the case is not an authority for the principles enunciated in such opinions, as there is a concurrence merely in the result. James v. Patten, 6 N. Y. 9, 55 Am. Dec. 376.

[a] Decisions by appellate courts of other districts should be followed by an inferior court when there is no controlling decision by the court of last resort or the appellate court of its own district. Hamlin v. Bender, 92 Misc. 16, 155 N. Y. Supp. 963. Compare Nichols v. Fanning, 20 Misc. 73, 45 N. Y. Supp. 466. See supra, note 49.

[b] A federal district court is bound (1) by the standing decisions of its own circuit court of appeals (Prudential Ins. Co. v. Herald, 247 Fed. 681), but (2) not by the decisions of a court of appeals of another circuit. Bright v. State (C. C. A.), 249 Fed. 950; Continental Securities Co. v. Inverhorough R. Trans. Co., 165 Fed. 945; In re Baird, 154 Fed. 215. (3)

District and other inferior court decisions are never binding as precedents on higher courts,<sup>62</sup> although they may be considered and may sometimes have a certain persuasive force in the absence of a controlling precedent.<sup>63</sup>

Courts of coordinate jurisdiction are not bound by each other's decisions,<sup>64</sup> but, when apparently sound, until the matter is decided by a higher court, they are of great persuasive force and generally followed.<sup>65</sup>

Yet when the matter in hand has not been decided by the supreme court or the court of appeals of its own circuit it will generally follow such decisions when in point and apparently sound. *Courtney v. Civil and Criminal Courts.—Where final appellate jurisdiction in civil cases is in one court and in criminal cases is in another, the decisions of each within its field is binding upon the other,<sup>66</sup> but decisions of one within the field of the other are not binding on the latter,<sup>67</sup> unless made before it was created, when jurisdiction of both classes of cases was in one court.<sup>68</sup>

2. State Court Decisions in Other States.—The rule of stare decisis, in its strictest application, is concerned only with decisions in the jurisdiction where rendered, and therefore state court decisions are not binding as precedents in the courts of other states;<sup>69</sup> as, for example, the adjudication of a federal question, in the absence of a federal decision,<sup>70</sup> the construction of a will,<sup>71</sup> and, although of persuasive force and not lightly to be disregarded,<sup>72</sup> decisions on rules of procedure.<sup>73</sup> But such decisions, in the absence of a controlling been said to be the court's duty to do so.<sup>10</sup> So it has been held that decisions should not be adhered to which were based on a repealed statute,<sup>11</sup> or which erroneously construe a statute,<sup>12</sup> or are antagonistic to express provisions of the state constitution,<sup>13</sup> or state laws,<sup>14</sup> or when there have arisen conditions which could not be foreseen at the time the decision was rendered,<sup>15</sup> or when the reasons upon which it was founded no longer exist.<sup>16</sup>

B. SINGLE DECISIONS.—The rule of stare decisis is universally observed when there has been, on a point of law, a series of adjudications all to the same effect,<sup>17</sup> and a single case is sufficient to invoke the rule,<sup>18</sup> especially when long acquiesced in.<sup>19</sup> And, of course, a single decision is binding on a lower court.<sup>20</sup> But where important rights are involved, a single decision which has not been long acquiesced in and is not a rule of property, will not prevent a re-examination by the court rendering it of the legal questions involved.<sup>21</sup>

I. STATEMENT OF FACTS AND STATEMENT OF CASE.

A. STATEMENT OF THE CASE. — 1. Generally. — In some states, matters not a part of the record proper may for purposes of review be made a part thereof by a statement of the case.<sup>1</sup> Sometimes there are two statements provided for, a statement on new trial,<sup>2</sup> and a statement on appeal.<sup>3</sup>

2. Statement on New Trial. — Statutes sometimes provide that applications for new trial on certain grounds, such as excessive damages, insufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict, or error in law

Idaho. Van Camp v. Comrs. Custer Co., 2 Idaho 29, 2 Pac. 721. Mont.—Manuel v. Scott, 37 Mont. 29, 94 Pac. 487. N. D. State v. Scholfield, 13 N. D. 664, 102 N. W. 878.

[a] Interlocutory orders, not to be considered when not incorporated in a statement. Abbott v. Douglass, 28 Cal. 295.

[b] Where the answer admits the facts in the complaint, no statement is necessary. McHenry v. Roper, 7 N. D. 584, 75 N. W. 903.

[c] An assignment of errors cannot be received as a statement of facts. Fleeson v. Savage S. Min. Co., 3 Nev. 157.

[d] A transcript containing an abstract of the minutes, must be disregarded because not a statement. Irwin v. Samson, 10 Nev. 282.

[e] A paper simply reciting the progress of the trial in narrative form is not a statement. Corbett v. Job, 5 Nev. 201.

2. Bradbury v. Idaho & O. L. I. Co., 2 Idaho 239, 10 Pac. 620.

[a] The office of a statement on new trial is to bring into the record those matters arising during the progress of the trial constituting a basis of the motion and which a party desires to have reviewed on appeal. Harper v. Minor, 27 Cal. 107.

[b] On appeal from an order granting a nonsuit, a statement on new trial is improper, but the evidence can be brought up either by a bill of exceptions or statement on appeal. Kleinschmidt v. McAndrews, 4 Mont. 8, 34, 5 Pac. 281.

3. Elder v. Frevert, 18 Nev. 278, 3 Pac. 237, holding the statement in question must be disregarded as a statement on new trial but as it purported to be a statement on appeal, it might be so considered. But see Harding v. McLaughlin, 23 Mont. 334, 58 Pac. 865, statements on appeal are no longer recognized in Montana, but statements on new trial are. See Rev. Code §6799.

occurring at the trial, may be made either upon a statement of the case or the minutes of the court.<sup>4</sup> This statement is prepared and filed after the service of the notice of intention to move for a new trial,<sup>5</sup> and before hearing and determination of the motion, unless waived.<sup>6</sup> When the motion is made on the minutes of the court, some statutes provide for a statement to be prepared subsequent to the determination of the motion to be used as a part of the record on appeal.<sup>7</sup>

3. Statement on Appeal.—Some statutes provide for a statement of the case as part of the record on appeal.<sup>8</sup> And it is sometimes expressly provided that any statement used on a motion for new trial,<sup>9</sup> or settled after such motion when the motion is made on the minutes of the court,<sup>10</sup> may be used on appeal from a final judgment,<sup>11</sup> as well as on an appeal from an order granting or denying a new trial.<sup>12</sup> But the appellant is not limited to the use of such state-

On appeals from justice's court, see 18 STANDARD PROC. 274.

[a] On simple appeal from a judgment, there is no statement. Harper v. Minor, 27 Cal. 107; Bradbury v. Idaho & O. L. I. Co., 2 Idaho 239, 10 Pac. 620.

[b] On appeal from an order refusing a new trial, errors of fact or law reviewable on appeal are such as appear in a bill of exceptions or "statement of the case." Thompson v. Patterson, 54 Cal. 542. See Keating v. Keating, 23 Cal. App. 384, 138 Pac. 118.

17. Cal.—Great Western Gold Co. v. Chambers, 153 Cal. 307, 95 Pac. 151; Thompson v. Patterson, 54 Cal. 542; Pease v. Fink, 3 Cal. App. 371, 85 Pac. 657. Idaho.—Warren v. Stoddart, 6 Idaho 692, 59 Pac. 540. Nev.—Rosina v. Trowbridge, 20 Nev. 105, 17 Pac.

751; Rose v. Richmond Min. Co., 17 Nev. 25, 27 Pac. 1105; Corbett v. Job, 5 Nev. 201. N. D.—McLaughlin v. Thompson, 19 N. D. 34, 120 N. W. 554; Mooney v. Donovan, 9 N. D. 93, 81 N. W. 50.

[a] Whether in law or equity, the grounds of objection must be stated. Barrett v. Tewksbury, 15 Cal. 354.

[b] If not specified, the statement will be disregarded on the hearing. Crane v. Gladding, 59 Cal. 303; Thompson v. Patterson, 54 Cal. 542.

[c] Specification of errors is not excused by (1) specification in notice of intention to move for a new trial (Leonard v. Shaw, 114 Cal. 69, 45 Pac. 1012) or (2) by an assignment of errors filed in the case afterwards and included in the transcript. Butterfield v. Central Pac. R. Co., 37 Cal. 381.

[d] Specification should conform to the notice of intention to move for a new trial. Pico v. Cohn, 78 Cal. 384, 20 Pac. 706.

[e] General specification (1) is insufficient. Great Western Gold Co. v. Chambers, 153 Cal. 307, 95 Pac. 151; Joyce v. White, 95 Cal. 236, 30 Pac. 524 (a specification that the court erred in giving instructions asked by plaintiff is too general); Shepherd v. Jones, 71 Cal. 223, 16 Pac. 711. (2) But a specification of error in the giving of each of the instructions requested is sufficient. McCreery v. Everding, 44 Cal. 246.

[f] Specification of error in ruling on motion for nonsuit need not restate evidence. Donahue v. Gallavan, 43 Cal. 573.

[g] A specification of the insufficiency of the evidence (1) to justify the verdict or decision is required to specify the particulars in which the evidence is insufficient. Cal.—Bell v. Staaeke, 141 Cal. 186, 74 Pac. 774; De Molera v. Martin, 120 Cal. 544, 52 Pac. 825; Hastaran v. Marchand, 23 to contain so much of the evidence as may be necessary to explain the errors or grounds specified, and no more.<sup>18</sup> And it has been held it may contain other matter necessary for an explanation of the grounds of error, when not made part of the judgment or minutes.<sup>19</sup> Documents and documentary evidence to be used on appeal must be incorporated in the statement.<sup>20</sup> Instructions must be set out when error in giving or refusing them is relied on.<sup>21</sup> In some states it is held that the notice of intention to move for a new trial need not be Kunert, 17 N. D. 120, 115 N. W. 76. (2) "Whenever there is a reasonably successful effort to state the particulars and they are such as may have been sufficient to inform the opposing counsel and the court of the grounds" the specification will be held sufficient. Porter v. Counts, 6 Cal. App. 550, 92 Pac. 655.

18. Cal.—Barrett v. Tewksbury, 15 Cal. 354. Mont.—Hickey v. Anaconda C. Min. Co., 33 Mont. 46, 56, 81 Pac. 806, all the evidence necessary to make the statement truly represent the case should be stated. Nev.—Rose v. Richmond Min. Co., 17 Nev. 25, 27 Pac. 1105. N. D.—Smith v. Kunert, 17 N. D. 120, 115 N. W. 76.

[a] On appeal from order on motion to strike out and amend judgment, testimony on the trial should not be included. State ex rel. Equitable Gold M. Co. v. Murphy, 29 Nev. 247, 88 Pac. 335.

[b] Where it is claimed verdict is contrary to the evidence, all the evidence should be set forth. Dawley v. Hovious, 23 Cal. 103.

[c] Brief statement of the substance of the evidence bearing on the point specified, instead of setting it out in full, is proper. Ross v. Roadhouse, 36 Cal. 580.

[d] Literal transcript of testimony (1) is not proper (Smith v. Kunert, 17 N. D. 120, 115 N. W. 76), except (2) under statute where appellant specifies he desires to review entire case. Blessett v. Turcotte, 20 N. D. 151, 127 N. W. 505; Hilde v. Nelson, 19 N. D. 634, 125 N. W. 474.

[e] Where the question is as to the sufficiency of evidence to sustain a finding, it is sufficient to insert a sufficient amount of evidence on each side of the question to show a substantial conflict. Vatcher v. Wilbur, 144 Cal. 536, 78 Pac. 14.

[f] Testimony To Be in Narrative Form.—Friel v. Kimberly-Montana Gold Min. Co., 34 Mont. 54, 85 Pac. 734; Fant v. Tandy, 7 Mont. 443, 17 Pac. 560.

[g] A settled statement is presumed to contain all the evidence given (1) which is necessary to be stated in order to explain the specified point though it does not contain an express statement to that effect. Abbey Homestead Assn. v. Willard, 48 Cal. 614; Gamble v. Hanchett, 34 Nev. 351, 453, 126 Pac. 111. (2) This rule does not apply where the contrary appears from the statement itself. Poujade v. Ryan, 21 Nev. 449, 33 Pac. 659.

[h] A statement that a party "proved" certain facts is not objectionable where there is no contest as to the facts. Wilson v. Hill, 17 Nev. 401, 30 Pac. 1076.

19. Corbett v. Job, 5 Nev. 201, such as the verdict.

20. Wheeler v. Farmer, 38 Cal. 203; Stickney v. Hanrahan, 7 Idaho 424, 63 Pac. 189.

[a] Brief statement of instruments is sufficient where no point is made as to the construction of the language. Conroy v. Duane, 45 Cal. 597; Knowles v. Inches, 12 Cal. 212.

[b] May be incorporated by reference, (1) if on file. Lake Shore Cattle Co. v. Modoc Land & L. Co., 127 Cal. 37, 59 Pac. 206; Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633, 22 Pac. 26, 131; Wheeler v. Farmer, 38 Cal. 203; Moore v. Taylor, 1 Idaho 583. (2) But documents referred to should be set out in the transcript. Lake Shore Cattle Co. v. Modoc Land & L. Co., 127 Cal. 37, 59 Pac. 206.

21. Moore v. Gilson, 23 Cal. App. 169, 137 Pac. 268; Sears v. Lydon, 5 Idaho 358, 49 Pac. 122.

included in the statement,<sup>22</sup> unless assailed as being insufficient,<sup>23</sup> even though the appeal is from the order on the motion.<sup>24</sup> But the order of the lower court denying the motion for new trial, or the minute entry, must be embodied in the statement.<sup>25</sup> Orders of the trial judge extending the time for preparation of the statement and service need not be included,<sup>26</sup> though orders overruling objections that the statement was not presented in time, should be.<sup>27</sup>

Matters of Record. — Whatever would be a matter of record without the statement, need not be included in the statement of the case.<sup>28</sup>

Exceptions may be saved in a statement of case as well as in a bill of exceptions.<sup>29</sup>

The insertion of improper matters in a statement of case does not vitiate it.<sup>30</sup>

A statement should not be stricken out for mere defects or omissions where it is properly authenticated and rightfully brought up to the appellate court,<sup>31</sup> though for such defects it will be disregarded.<sup>32</sup>

[a] Notice of intention is not a part of the record by statute, and is not to be brought up at all. If notice is not given or is given too late, this must be shown against settlement of the statement or in opposition to the motion. If an adverse ruling is made, necessary facts must be stated in the statement or bill of exceptions. Pico v. Cohn, 78 Cal. 384, 20 Pac. 706. But see Carr, Ryder & Adams Co. v. Closser, 27 Mont. 94, 69 Pac. 560, if the notice of intention is not included in the statement and the objection is not waived, the order will be reversed.

5. Compared With Bills of Exceptions.—A statement of case, though usually more full and complete than a bill of exceptions,<sup>33</sup> has been held to be about equivalent thereto for some purposes,<sup>34</sup> and may be considered as such when necessary.<sup>35</sup>

B. STATEMENT OF FACTS.—1. Generally.—Statutes in some states provide for a statement of facts on appeal,<sup>36</sup> whose purpose<sup>37</sup> is

Compare Boettcher v. Thompson, 21 S. D. 169, 110 N. W. 108.

[a] There is no substantial difference (1) between a bill of exceptions and statement of the case when settled; the only substantial difference being that in the latter in addition to setting forth the exceptions taken at the trial, the moving party must also specify the particular ones relied on in support of his motion for new trial. Pease v. Fink, 3 Cal. App. 371, 85 Pac. 657. See also Kelly v. Ning Yung etc. Assn., 138 Cal. 602, 72 Pac. 148; Warren v. Stoddart, 6 Idaho 692, 59 Pac. 540. (2) A bill of exceptions sets forth particular rulings with the evidence or offer on which they were made. But a statement of the case shows, in substance, the whole evidence, enabling the court to review the findings of the jury as well as the rulings of the judge. Saint Croix Lumb. Co. v. Pennington, 2 Dak. 467, 476, 11 N. W. 497. (3) A bill of exceptions may not be a statement of the case, but a statement usually contains all the exceptions that can be saved by a bill of exceptions. Steve v. Bonners Ferry Lumb. Co., 13 Idaho 384, 395, 92 Pac. 363. (4) "If such statement be considered a bill of exceptions (as may be done) specifications of error would not be necessary to review any alleged errors of law appearing therein." *Hastaran v. [a] When appeal is based on insufficiency of complaint, a statement of facts is not required. Benjamin v. Ernst, 83 Wash. 59, 145 Pac. 79.

[b] When all the evidence legally appears of record, a statement of facts is not required. State v. Connor, 86 Tex. 133, 23 S. W. 1103 (where agreed statement of facts on which trial is had is in record); Salinas v. Wright, 11 Tex. 572, 578.

[c] Recitals in the judgment, of conclusions of fact, do not supply the place of a statement. Wallace & Co. v. Bogel & Bro., 62 Tex. 636. See Craxton Wood & Co. v. Ryan, 3 White & W. Civ. Cas. (Tex.) §367, 369.

[d] No motion for new trial is necessary to authorize preparation of statement. Greer v. Featherston, 95 Tex. 654, 69 S. W. 69.

[e] Affidavits of witness on probate of will cannot be treated as a statement of facts. Walker v. Boyd (Tex. Civ. App.), 48 S. W. 602.

[a] When a reversal because of the exclusion of evidence is sought, a statement of facts which were in evidence to make the evidence in the case a part of the record on appeal. This statement is different from a bill of exceptions in its character, purpose and manner of preparation,<sup>38</sup> though often considered in connection with a bill of exceptions in the case.<sup>39</sup> In the absence of a statement of facts only such assignments of error<sup>40</sup> as are based on below must be presented so that the materiality of the evidence may be seen. Cottrell v. Teagarden, 25 Tex. 317.

38. Lobe & Co. v. Reinach & Co., 2 McGloin (La.) 82; Roundtree v. Galveston, 42 Tex. 612.

[a] Distinguished From Bill of Exceptions.—(1) "A bill of exceptions and statement of facts are alike intended to be incorporated into and become parts of the record of the case. Still they are altogether different in their character and purposes, as well as in the manner of their preparation and authentication. The first serves to perpetuate in the record the ruling of the court to which the party presenting the bill excepts. Only such facts are set out in it as are necessary for the proper understanding of the action of the court to which the exception is taken. In its preparation and completion the opposite party has no necessary connection, and is frequently not even cognizant of its contents until it has become a part of the record. While the latter is intended to embody in the record all the evidence introduced on the trial as agreed to by the parties and approved by the court; or if the parties fail to agree, as certified to by the court after examining the statements prepared by them respectively." Roundtree v. Galveston, 42 Tex. 612. See also Lobe & Co. v. Reinach & Co., 2 McGloin (La.) 82. (2) The statement may be made to serve the purpose of a bill of exceptions also but a bill of exceptions not authenticated in the manner required for a statement cannot be regarded as a statement. Roundtree v. Galveston, 42 Tex. 612. See Dull v. Drake, 63 Tex. 205, 4 S. W. 364; Holmes v. Coalson (Tex. Civ. App.), 178 S. W. 628. (3) A statement to be used as a bill of exceptions must be filed within the time required for bills. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Eddins, 60 Tex. 656; Lockett v. Schurenberg, 60 Tex. 610.

[j] Instructions in writing, not to be included. Tergeson v. Robinson Mfg. Co., 48 Wash. 294, 93 Pac. 428.

45. Adams v. Dohrmann, 63 Cal. 417; Baum v. Meyer, 16 Nev. 91.

[a] In Texas after trial (1) either party may make out a written statement of facts given in evidence on the trial and submit it to the opposite party. He may use the stenographer's transcript (Kelso v. Townsend, 13 Tex. 140; Hermann v. Bailey [Tex. Civ. App.], 174 S. W. 865 [timely submission]; Rader v. Galveston H. & S. A. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.], 137 S. W. 718), or (2) the stenographer may be requested to prepare the statement. Elliott v. Ferguson, 100 Tex. 418, 100 S. W. 911.

[b] One who does not appeal may propose and procure certification of statement of facts in the event he should appeal. Lauridsen v. Lewis, 47 Wash. 594, 92 Pac. 440.

46. Codd v. Von Der Ahe, 92 Wash. 529, 159 Pac. 686; Michaelson v. Overmeyer, 77 Wash. 110, 137 Pac. 332.

[a] Time may be (1) extended (State ex rel. Sefrit v. Superior Court, 74 Wash. 601, 134 Pac. 183 [abuse of discretion in refusing extension]), on (2) application on notice. Michaelson v. Overmeyer, 77 Wash. 110, 137 Pac. 332; McQuesten v. Morrill, 12 Wash. 335, 41 Pac. 56.

[b] Supreme court cannot extend time. Aultman-Taylor M. Co. v. Clausen, 18 N. D. 483, 121 N. W. 64.

[c] A failure to prepare the statement within the prescribed time is (1) a waiver of the statement (Johnson v. Wells Fargo & Co., 6 Nev. 224, 3 Am. Rep. 245), unless (2) the adverse party waives this waiver. Sweeney v. Great Falls & Canada Ry. Co., 11 Mont. 34, 27 Pac. 347; Goldfield-Mohawk Min. Co. v. Frances-Mohawk M. & L. Co., 31 Nev. 348, 102 Pac. 963; Johnson v.

Wells Fargo & Co., 6 Nev. 224, 3 Am. Rep. 245.

[d] Party may propose amendments without waiving objection as to time by a statement reserving his right to object. Beach v. Spokane R. & W. Co., 25 Mont. 367, 65 Pac. 106; Sweeney v. Great Falls & Canada Ry. Co., 11 Mont. 34, 27 Pac. 347.

requires it.<sup>92</sup> Under some statutes the statement may be authenticated by the signature and certificate of the parties when agreed upon by them,<sup>93</sup> or by the certificate of the clerk when no amendments are filed.<sup>94</sup>

H. FILING AND ANNEXATION TO JUDGMENT ROLL. — When settled and certified or agreed upon, the statement shall be filed with the clerk,<sup>95</sup> who is required to annex it to the judgment roll.<sup>96</sup> In Texas the original statement of facts is sent up as part of the record on appeal.<sup>97</sup>

I. AMENDMENTS AND RESETTLEMENT. — The trial judge has power to cancel his certificate and amend or resettle the statement of case under statute authorizing amendment of any "proceedings"<sup>98</sup> but the appellate court has no power to alter or amend it.<sup>99</sup>

II. REPORTER'S TRANSCRIPT.<sup>1</sup> — It has been held proper, sometimes under express statute, to make the reporter's transcript a part of the record by incorporating it in or otherwise making it part of the bill of exceptions.<sup>2</sup> And statutes sometimes provide that a

I. RIGHT TO MAKE.—The defendant in any criminal prosecution,<sup>1</sup> in jurisdictions where the practice has not become obsolete,<sup>2</sup> and where permitted by statute,<sup>3</sup> may make an unsworn statement to the jury in his own behalf.<sup>4</sup>

II. NATURE, RESTRICTIONS AND WEIGHT.—The statement must relate to the facts of the case,<sup>5</sup> and if the accused makes unwarranted digressions relating to wholly irrelevant circumstances the court may interrupt him and insist upon a closer adherence to the material facts,<sup>6</sup> but it is error to interrupt the defendant if the facts being stated by him are in truth connected with those facts upon which he bases his defense.<sup>7</sup> The statement though in the nature of evidence,<sup>8</sup> is not strictly evidence,<sup>9</sup> and the jury may give it the weight they think it deserves,<sup>10</sup> and the accused, in making it, is not restricted or controlled by the rules of evidence.<sup>11</sup>

[a] As supplemental to the closing argument of defendant's counsel, and before the final argument by the prosecution, (1) the accused is sometimes permitted to make an unsworn statement to the jury, but the practice seems to be limited, and its application is not uniform, applying in some jurisdictions to prosecutions for high treason (Reg. v. Millhouse, 15 Cox C. C. 622; Rex v. Watson, 32 How. Eng. St. Ir. 1, 538), (2) in others to capital cases generally (Com. v. McConnell, 162 Mass. 499, 39 N. E. 107), but (3) to nothing less than capital cases (Com. v. Burrough, 162 Mass. 513, 39 N. E. 184), while (4) in some jurisdictions the practice seems to apply to all criminal prosecutions. See Jones v. State, 181 Ala. 63, 61 So. 434; Blackburn v. State, 71 Ala. 319, 46 Am. Rep. 323; Palmer v. People, 43 Mich. 414, 5 N. W. 450; Burden v. People, 26 Mich. 162.

[b] The constitutional right of the accused to be heard "by himself and his counsel" does not give any right to make a statement except as a witness. Jones v. State, 181 Ala. 63, 61 So. 434. See Williams v. State (Ark.), 16 S. W. 816.

[b] Usual Tests of Credibility. "Such statement is subject, in our opinion, at least to the ordinary intrinsic tests of credibility governing the sworn testimony of witnesses. The character of the defendant, if legitimately in evidence, may be considered, his demeanor on the stand, his intelligence, the accuracy of his memory, the inherent probability of his statement, its consistency with itself and the other circumstances of the case, or the lack of these elements of veracity, together with many other considerations liable to affect the credibility of the statement, or afford any reasonable presumption of its probability or improbability." Blackburn v. State, 71 Ala. 319, 46 Am. Rep. 323. See also Chappell v. State, 71 Ala. 322; People v. Jones, 24 Mich. 215.

III. HOW AND WHEN MADE, ASSISTANCE.—The defendant is not sworn before giving his statement.<sup>12</sup> The making of the statement is strictly a personal privilege which may be read or spoken by the accused, but not by his attorney;<sup>13</sup> nor can a co-defendant make a statement on behalf of the accused.<sup>14</sup> But the defendant's counsel may be permitted, upon motion duly made in open court,<sup>15</sup> or in some other appropriate way,<sup>16</sup> to call the defendant's attention to a material omission. However, without permission, questions directed to the accused by his counsel while he is making his statement, are improper.<sup>17</sup> Whether a suggestion may be made or question asked rests in the court's discretion.<sup>18</sup> The statement may be made before<sup>19</sup> or after the close of the evidence<sup>20</sup> but the right must be claimed before the prosecution has closed its final argument to the jury.<sup>21</sup>

not become a witness nor subject to the rules applicable to witnesses.

[a] But see Burek v. State, 71 Ala. 377, containing dictum to the effect that defendant's unsworn statement is governed by the same rules as his sworn testimony, which forbid testimony directly as to his intention or motives.

[b] Reading Documents, Letters, etc.—The accused cannot make documentary evidence relating to the case a part of his statement without preliminary proof of its genuineness. Nero v. State, 126 Ga. 554, 55 S. E. 404; Montross v. State, 72 Ga. 261, 53 Am. Rep. 840; Woodard v. State, 5 Ga. App. 447, 63 S. E. 573.

[c] Statement as Foundation for Incompetent Evidence.—While great latitude is given the accused in making a statement, he cannot be permitted by such statement to lay a foundation for introducing in his favor evidence otherwise inadmissible. Baker v. State, 142 Ga. 619, 83 S. E. 531. See also Wiggins v. State, 16 Ga. App. 477, 85 S. E. 674.

16. See infra, this note.

18. Echols v. State, 109 Ga. 508, 34 S. E. 1038. But see People v. Annis, 13 Mich. 511.

[a] The court should, sua sponte, prevent any interference with the accused while making his statement, either by questions or suggestions from the jury, the state's attorney, the accused's counsel, or anyone else. Hawkins v. State, 29 Fla. 554, 10 So. 822.

19. Dixon v. State, 12 Ga. App. 17, 76 S. E. 794. See Burden v. People, 26 Mich. 162.

20. See cases in following note.

[a] After Rebuttal Evidence by State.—Though defendant has declined to make a statement after the close of the evidence in chief, it is error to refuse him the privilege after the state has introduced further evidence in rebuttal. King v. State, 99 Ga. 52, 25 S. E. 613.

subject to cross-examination on his statement without his consent,<sup>23</sup> though he may waive this right and submit to cross-examination,<sup>24</sup> in which event the general rules relating to cross-examination of witnesses generally will be observed.<sup>25</sup>

The prosecution may properly be allowed to introduce evidence in rebuttal of new matter contained in the statement.<sup>26</sup> But the defendant, it seems, cannot be impeached for the purpose of counteracting his statement,<sup>27</sup> nor does it furnish sufficient ground, as might his testimony as a witness, to justify proof of his violent and dangerous character.<sup>28</sup>

V. COMMENT.—While the failure of accused to make a statement cannot be commented on<sup>29</sup> the statement itself, being in the nature of evidence, is the legitimate subject of comment.<sup>30</sup>

VI. SUPPLEMENTARY STATEMENT.—The defendant is not entitled, as a matter of right, to make more than one statement,<sup>31</sup> and this rule is not changed by the subsequent introduction of material evidence against him.<sup>32</sup> Permission to make an additional statement may be granted in the discretion of the trial court.<sup>33</sup>

State*, 116 Ga. 537, 42 S. E. 787, 67 L. R. A. 426.

State*, 71 Ala. 322, dictum (Somerville, J., reserving any expression of opinion as to proof of bad character) that a defendant cannot be impeached "as witnesses are, by proof of bad character, by cross-examination, nor by proof of extrinsic facts, introduced for such purpose."

VII. INSTRUCTIONS.<sup>34</sup> — The court may base its general instructions on the evidence alone, without alluding to the defendant's statement,<sup>35</sup> but at some stage of the charge should instruct the jury on the law applicable to such statement.<sup>36</sup> On the other hand, in the absence of a request, it is not necessary to charge on any theory of defense arising solely from the statement of accused.<sup>37</sup>

VIII. NEW TRIAL AND APPEAL. — As a general rule the refusal to permit a supplementary statement is not a sufficient ground for a new trial,<sup>38</sup> nor are inaccurate instructions when the verdict is that which the accused demands in his statement.<sup>39</sup> In accordance with the general rules relating to appeals, a decision of the trial court on matters resting in its discretion will not be reversed in the absence of manifest abuse of discretion.<sup>40</sup>

2. Suits Against State Officers.—a. Generally.—The mere fact that an action is against its officers does not alone make it one against the state.<sup>18</sup> Such an action constitutes an action against the state when it is of such a character that an adjudication against the officer is in effect an adjudication against the state.<sup>19</sup> If the state is the real party in interest, the suit, though against its officers, is against the state and cannot be maintained.<sup>20</sup> Conversely, a suit against a

[a] Tests for determining where a suit is against the state are: whether the state is named as a party of record; whether the action is directly on contract; whether it is to control the discretion of executive officers or administration of funds in the treasury; whether it seeks to compel performance of the state's contract; and whether the state is a necessary party. Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 293, 5 Sup. Ct. 903, 962, 29 L. ed. 185.

[a] If the result of the action is to appropriate state's funds to satisfy the judgment to be rendered, the action is against the state. Wilkinson v. State, 42 Utah 483, 493, 134 Pac. 626.

[b] Suits to compel state officers to do acts imposing a contractual pecuniary liability on the state are against the state. Farmers Nat. Bank v. Jones, 105 Fed. 459.

[c] But "the fact that the state voluntarily assumes the defense in the cause or litigation does not make it the real party." Western Union Tel. Co. v. Andrews, 154 Fed. 95, 106.

[d] That the state may be consequentially affected is not sufficient to state officer in which the state has no pecuniary interest or substantive right to protect is not against the state.<sup>21</sup> There is a broad line of demarcation between cases where the decree requires, by affirmative official action, the performance of an obligation to the state in its political capacity and those in which actions are maintained against persons violating personal and property right while acting under color of authority unconstitutional and void.<sup>22</sup>

But affirmative action may be compelled, where the state has given its assent by enjoining certain duties upon its officers.<sup>23</sup>

b. To Redress and Prevent Unauthorized Acts.—When officers of a state act under invalid authority or unconstitutional statute,<sup>24</sup> or exceed or abuse their lawful authority,<sup>25</sup> they act as individuals mere-deprive the court of jurisdiction. Fowler v. Lindsey, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 411, 1 L. ed. 658.

[c] Certiorari to review proceedings of a state board is not a suit against the state. Hall v. Bledsoe, 126 Ark. 125, 189 S. W. 1041.

[f] A will contest to which the state or a department is made a defendant because named as a beneficiary therein is not against the state, particularly where the legacies have not been paid, as it is a proceeding in rem. Hogston v. Bell, 185 Ind. 536, 112 N. E. 883.

[g] In an action by the state to recover land, a defense seeking to protect defendant's possession is not a suit against the state. Texas Channel & Dock Co. v. State, 104 Tex. 168, 135 S. W. 522.

[a] There is a wide difference between a bill to prevent the commission enjoin prosecutions under a confessedly valid law by an officer charged with its enforcement, is in effect a suit against the state.<sup>31</sup>

c. Mandamus and Injunction Against an Officer.—A proceeding by mandamus,<sup>32</sup> or injunction,<sup>33</sup> to compel or restrain the performance of ministerial duties, is not a suit against the state. But it is otherwise where the duty is purely executive and political.<sup>34</sup> And it has of a positive trespass, and a bill against officials merely to test the constitutionality of a statute under which they act, by formal judicial proceedings. Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 19 Sup. Ct. 269, 43 L. ed. 535; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Alexander, 113 Fed. 347.

[b] The principle is that the courts cannot enjoin state officers from taking action under a constitutional statute unless the officers are about to do some act which, if unauthorized by a valid law, constitutes an unlawful interference with the rights of a party. Missouri K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Shannon, 100 Tex. 379, 100 S. W. 138.

[c] "Special duty" refers to an administrative duty exercised by boards and ministerial officers, but not attorneys. Therefore a proceeding merely to test the validity of a statute brought against officers, who act only by judicial proceedings "as attorneys for the state," is a suit against the state. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Andrews, 154 Fed. 95, 106.

involving a discretion will not be enjoined unless the discretion is exercised fraudulently, arbitrarily or illegally.<sup>46</sup>

V. CLAIMS AGAINST STATES.—Though some statutes authorize actions upon claims against the state,<sup>47</sup> in some jurisdictions a claimant is given a remedy by appeal to the courts from an adverse decision on his claim.<sup>48</sup> The writ of certiorari is sometimes used to review the audit.<sup>49</sup> And in some states courts of claims have been created with jurisdiction to hear and determine private claims against the state.<sup>50</sup>

Mandamus To Enforce Claims Against.—Mandamus will lie to compel action on claims against states and territories in accordance with the general rules elsewhere discussed,<sup>51</sup> unless the circumstances are such that the proceeding is one against the state and the state has not consented to be sued.<sup>52</sup> Accordingly the proper officers will be compelled to act on a claim when they wholly refuse to do so.<sup>53</sup> But their

VI. TERRITORIAL COURTS.—Territorial courts are created by act of congress,<sup>63</sup> and they usually possess jurisdiction of causes of a civil nature without regard to the inquiry whether the controversy, if it had arisen in a state, would have been cognizable in the state or in the federal courts.<sup>64</sup> Though for some purposes they may be vested with the powers of the courts of the United States,<sup>65</sup> they are not, strictly speaking courts of the United States within the meaning of the constitution,<sup>66</sup> but are legislative courts of the territory, created by virtue of the power of congress to make needful laws respecting territories.<sup>67</sup> The acts of congress respecting proceedings in the United States courts do not apply to the procedure in territorial courts,<sup>68</sup> though it has been held that the federal equity rules bind the territorial court in the absence of a local equity system.<sup>69</sup> The territorial courts may adopt rules not in conflict with the constitution or laws of the United States or of the territory.<sup>70</sup>

I. JUDICIAL CONTROL OVER PROCESS OF LEGISLATION.

A. GENERALLY.<sup>1</sup>—As a general rule, the courts will not intervene to hinder or influence the process of legislation in any of its steps.<sup>2</sup>

B. INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM.—Ministerial duties resting upon officers in connection with initiative and referendum petitions may be enforced by the writ of mandamus when the right is clear.<sup>3</sup> It has been held since the duty of printing proposed acts on ballots or of calling an election is a political act, equity has no jurisdiction to grant an injunction,<sup>4</sup> but statutes sometimes authorize injunctive relief.<sup>5</sup>

II. JUDICIAL DETERMINATION OF CONSTITUTIONALITY.

A. GENERALLY.—The courts have the power,<sup>6</sup> and it is their duty to declare a statute unconstitutional which is clearly in violation of the constitution, when the question is properly presented,<sup>7</sup> and when it is this jurisdiction is sometimes withheld from intermediate appellate courts.<sup>18</sup> Federal courts have power to declare statutes unconstitutional, as in violation of a state as well as the federal constitution,<sup>19</sup> although they are reluctant to declare a state statute to be in conflict with a state constitution before that question has been decided by the state tribunals, and will not do so as a general rule.<sup>20</sup> If conflict with the state constitution is the sole ground of attack, the supreme court of the state is the final authority,<sup>21</sup> and in other cases, the ultimate decision rests with the United States supreme court.<sup>22</sup>

The validity of a statute must be determined by its terms,<sup>65</sup> and by what it authorizes,<sup>66</sup> and not by what has been done or probably will be done under it.<sup>67</sup> As a general rule the court can consider only those matters which appear upon the face of the statute,<sup>68</sup> or which it takes judicial notice of.<sup>69</sup> The court will look beyond the mere form of expression to the object and purpose of the legislation,<sup>70</sup> and will sometimes consider the habits and customs of the community.<sup>71</sup> The courts cannot inquire into the legality of the legislature itself,<sup>72</sup> or their compliance with their own rules,<sup>73</sup> or the motives of the legislature in passing it, or the means by which they were induced to enact it.<sup>74</sup> The courts are not in accord as to whether the legislative journals may be resorted to in case of a regularly enrolled and authenticated act, to show non-compliance with constitutional requirements as to the method of its enactment.<sup>75</sup>

H. CONCLUSIVENESS. — Adjudications of the constitutionality of an act in previous actions between other parties do not preclude a review of the question based on other grounds.<sup>76</sup> But when the appellate court has passed upon a statute a number of times, it may decline to re-examine it when no special reason is assigned why or how it is unconstitutional.<sup>77</sup>

III. WHETHER STATUTORY REMEDY IS EXCLUSIVE.<sup>78</sup>

Where a statute confers a new right, the remedy provided by the statute is exclusive, so far as the common-law courts are concerned.<sup>79</sup> If the right existed at common law, the remedy provided by the statute is cumulative,<sup>80</sup> unless the common-law remedy is abrogated.<sup>81</sup>

IV. EFFECT OF REPEALING ACTS ON PENDING ACTIONS.

In the absence of a saving clause,<sup>82</sup> the repeal of a statute creating a cause of action or a remedy, or conferring jurisdiction, determines all pending proceedings under it, at the point where the repeal finds them.<sup>83</sup> And on repeal pending appeal, the appellate court cannot

VI. PLEADING STATUTES.—A. NECESSITY OF.—Statutes which are judicially noticed, of course need not be specially pleaded.<sup>93</sup> Thus in actions in state courts it is not necessary to plead public statutes of the forum,<sup>94</sup> or the statutes of the United States.<sup>95</sup> And in the federal courts, the laws of a state,<sup>96</sup> and of the United States,<sup>97</sup> need not be pleaded. But private statutes<sup>98</sup> and statutes of other<sup>99</sup>

A. 541, holding an allegation that a "surrogate had jurisdiction and was duly authorized and empowered by the laws of the state of New Jersey to issue said letters" of administration is sufficient to authorize proof of the laws. To approval,<sup>7</sup> or by the volumes and sections of a compilation,<sup>8</sup> unless such a method of pleading is authorized by statute.<sup>9</sup> And where it is claimed the cause of action is barred by a foreign law, facts bringing the action within its application must be alleged,<sup>10</sup> unless a statute provides otherwise.<sup>11</sup>

VII. JUDICIAL QUESTIONS AND QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT.<sup>12</sup> — It is a judicial question whether a general law can be made applicable,<sup>13</sup> or whether a given act repeals another.<sup>14</sup> The public or private character of a statute,<sup>15</sup> its constitutionality,<sup>16</sup> and the construction, effect and application of statutes,<sup>17</sup> are questions of law for the court. So also it is within the province of the courts to ascertain the meaning of and constitution, when such question properly arises.<sup>18</sup>

[a] "Among the well settled rules of construction of statutes, are these: 1st, the natural import of the words of any legislative act, according to the common use of them when applied to the subject matter of the act, is to be taken as expressing the intention of the legislature, unless the intention so resulting from the ordinary import of the words be repugnant to sound acknowledged principles of public policy, . . . and 2d, if the subject of the statute relates to courts or legal proofs, the words of the legislature are to be construed technically, unless from the statute it appears that the terms were used in a more popular sense." *People ex rel. [a] Some rules of construction of statutes are equally applicable (1) to the construction of the constitution. People v. May, 3 Mich. 598, 605. (2) But "a written constitution must be interpreted and effect given to it as the paramount law of the land, equally obligatory upon the legislature as upon other departments of government and individual citizens, according to its spirit and the intent of its framers, as indicated by its terms." People ex rel. Bolton v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50, 55. (3) And since constitutions import the utmost discrimination in the

Foreign Laws. — The functions of the judge and jury with respect to foreign laws are not well distinguished.<sup>19</sup> As a general rule, foreign laws are facts which must be proved to and found by the jury as such,<sup>20</sup> unless by statute the court is required to take judicial notice of the statutes and decisions of other countries or states;<sup>21</sup> but it has been held that the better opinion is that the evidence should be addressed to the court rather than the jury.<sup>22</sup> What is proper evidence of the law is a question of law for the court.<sup>23</sup> Where the evidence of the foreign law is a single statute or decision of a court, the language of which is not in dispute, the construction of it, like any other writing, is a question of law for the court;<sup>24</sup> but where the law is to be de-use of language, while statutes are often hastily and unskillfully drawn, the discretion of courts is more restricted in applying the rules of construction to a constitution than in the construction of statutes. Greencastle v. Black, 5 Ind. 557, 566, 570. See also Dorman v. State, 34 Ala. 216, 238; Carton v. Secretary of State, 151 Mich. 337, 351, 115 N. W. 429, 439.

[a] Time for Request.—The request to have testimony reported must be made at the beginning of the trial and before any of the testimony is given.

erly requested by the parties or their attorneys,<sup>17</sup> or even in the absence of any such request.<sup>18</sup>

b. Discretion of Court.—The necessity and advisability of having all or any portion of the proceedings taken by a reporter is a matter which usually rests in the court's sound discretion,<sup>19</sup> and its ruling is not reviewable,<sup>20</sup> unless perhaps there is a palpable and prejudicial abuse of such discretion.<sup>21</sup> But in some states the party is entitled to have proceedings reported as a matter of right,<sup>22</sup> and the denial of such privilege will result in reversal regardless of the merits of the portion of the record omitted.<sup>23</sup> The requests of the party to have certain proceedings reported and the court's refusal thereof may be shown by affidavits or other competent evidence.<sup>24</sup>

I. DEFINITION AND NATURE.—Stipulations, within the meaning of the present article, are agreements entered into by litigants or their attorneys in reference to the conduct and management of a suit, action or other legal proceeding.<sup>1</sup> They necessarily differ in character and subject matter,<sup>2</sup> ranging all the way from mere admissions of fact simply relieving a party from the inconvenience of making proof<sup>3</sup> to agreements possessing all the essential characteristics of a mutual contract<sup>4</sup> by which each party grants to the other a con-

II. CAPACITY AND AUTHORITY TO STIPULATE. — A. IN GENERAL. — Within certain limitations,<sup>13</sup> it is always competent for litigants to waive rules of law or statutory provisions made in their favor,<sup>14</sup> but one who is neither a party to the particular proceeding nor the attorney or representative of a party, has no power to make stipulations in respect thereto.<sup>15</sup>

B. AUTHORITY OF ATTORNEY. — 1. In General. — The powers of an attorney at law in charge of litigation are very broad,<sup>16</sup> and he, in his honest judgment, must control all matters of practice and procedure in the action. Where, therefore, he has been retained pending litigation or in contemplation thereof,<sup>17</sup> and appears as attorney of record in the proceeding,<sup>18</sup> he may, either in or out of court,<sup>19</sup> enter into binding agreements in reference to its prosecution and management,<sup>20</sup> providing such agreements concern the remedy merely; he

D. IN BEHALF OF INFANTS AND OTHER INCOMPETENTS. — One who conducts a legal proceeding as next friend, guardian ad litem or attorney for an infant or other incompetent may bind the infant by stipulations concerning matters of procedure.<sup>40</sup> He cannot, however, without the court's consent, surrender any of the substantial property rights of such minor or incompetent.<sup>41</sup> And in the exercise of its control over the rights of minors, the court may set aside or disregard stipulations made on their behalf which are shown to have

C. DEFINITENESS AND CERTAINTY.—A stipulation, to be enforceable by the court should be definite and certain in character,<sup>60</sup> and not be merely the expression of a legal opinion or conclusion.<sup>61</sup>

D. ENTRY OR FILING.—Statutes or court rules usually require stipulations to be entered upon the minutes of the court or filed with the clerk.<sup>62</sup> The object of such requirements is to preserve such a record of the stipulation as will preclude any question concerning its character or effect and to enable the court to ascertain its extent from the record.<sup>63</sup> They do not aim to enlarge or abridge the authority of the attorney in making stipulations but only prescribe the manner of its exercise.<sup>64</sup>

Time To File.—The statute may prescribe within what time the attorney must file a stipulation,<sup>65</sup> otherwise mere delay<sup>66</sup> in doing so

Province of Judge and Jury.<sup>76</sup> — The construction of stipulations, as of other written instruments, is a matter for the court.<sup>77</sup>

VI. AMENDMENT AND MODIFICATION. — Upon proper application,<sup>78</sup> and good cause shown,<sup>79</sup> the court may, in its discretion,<sup>80</sup> correct or reform the erroneous or imperfect expression of the stipulation<sup>81</sup> so as to have it conform to the real agreement as intended by the parties in making it.<sup>82</sup>

VII. WITHDRAWING AND SETTING ASIDE. — A. IN GENERAL. — Courts are prone to uphold and enforce stipulations,<sup>83</sup> and it is their duty to enforce such agreements where valid.<sup>84</sup> They are not willing to grant relief from them when they are made under a full understanding of the facts existing at the time,<sup>85</sup> yet stipulations are very often improvidently entered into and stand in the way of substantial justice, and the circumstances may justify the court in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion<sup>86</sup> in permitting the parties

[a] A strong showing is necessary to in such case. For when one party to a mutual stipulation has on the faith of it so acted in the execution thereof that the status quo cannot be re-established as to one of them, it is only in a plain case of fraud, mistake or oppression that the stipulation should be set aside. Intervenors.—Upon the principal that intervenors take the case as they find it,<sup>10</sup> they have, when properly made parties to the suit, been concluded by stipulations entered into before their intervention.<sup>11</sup>

2. Strangers.—One not a party to the proceeding nor to the stipulation is not concluded thereby.<sup>12</sup>

3. Conclusiveness on Court.—It is the duty of the court to enforce and effectuate a valid stipulation<sup>13</sup> in conformity to its agreed

Stipulations not binding on court, see supra, IV, A.

[a] Where the action is tried by a referee pursuant to stipulation, the court cannot review the referee's findings. Grant v. National Bank, 232 Fed. 201.

[b] Although the stipulation "was perhaps foolish" the court will nevertheless enforce it where the parties do not seek to be relieved therefrom. Thus the court will enforce a stipulation of the defendant's attorney that "if they

terms,<sup>14</sup> particularly where the other party has in good faith relied upon it;<sup>15</sup> and though the court may on request of the parties amend the agreement,<sup>16</sup> it cannot modify, alter or change it in any material detail against their objection.<sup>17</sup> The court need not enforce an oral stipulation where a writing is necessary nor one which has not been entered or filed as required by law unless the stipulation in either case is admitted or has been acted upon,<sup>18</sup> nor need it give effect to a stipulation which is indefinite in character,<sup>19</sup> or one which is merely the expression of a legal conclusion,<sup>20</sup> or one which is not properly the subject of stipulation.<sup>21</sup>

Appellate Courts.—An appellate court should not disregard stipulations made at the trial and which would be binding on the trial court,<sup>22</sup> and on the other hand a stipulation which the trial judge might refuse to enforce would not conclude the appellate judge.<sup>23</sup>

B. OPERATION AND EFFECT.—No order of court is necessary to vitalize stipulations; they operate proprio vigore.<sup>24</sup> Where the exist-find 100 douche pans in the place, I am willing to have judgment entered against my client for the full amount.'" Broome-Clinton Co. v. Woltzer, 144 N. Y. Supp. 768.

[c] Reversal for Failure To Enforce.—Refusal to allow proof of damages under a stipulation permitting defendant to amend his answer to set up a claim for damages caused by plaintiff's levy of attachment in the same suit, held reversible error. Brown v. Spiegel, 155 Mich. 138, 120 N. W. 579.

Plead. — Hansford v. Stone-Ordean-Wells Co., 201 Fed. 185.

[b] Stipulation Not a Judgment.—Parties to a suit in equity agreed to settle it and dismiss the proceeding. The agreement was drawn up in writing and signed. A decree was entered dismissing the bill "as per the following stipulation now filed herein" and the instrument followed. The court construed the instrument, aside from the order of dismissal, as being neither a decree nor a consent decree, but merely an agreement entered into for the purpose of terminating the pending litigation. It did not, therefore, have the force and effect of a prior adjudication. People v. Spring Lake Drainage & Levee Dist., 253 Ill. 479, 97 N. E. 1042.

27. Webster v. Goolsby, 130 Ark. 141, 197 S. W. 286.

performance will lie,<sup>34</sup> or a mandatory injunction will issue to compel a stipulating party to perform certain acts in compliance with the agreement.<sup>35</sup>

Motion.—A binding stipulation relative to some step in the cause may be summarily enforced by motion,<sup>36</sup> and the order upon such motion should substantially conform to the agreement made by the parties,<sup>37</sup> and be specific enough to fully guard and protect the rights of the parties under their agreement.<sup>38</sup>

X. USE OF STIPULATION.—In the absence of limitations in the stipulation as to its use, the presumption is that it is intended for use at any stage of the litigation.<sup>39</sup> Thus a stipulation made in a justice court, and the use of which is not limited to that court, may be used on appeal therefrom.<sup>40</sup> But if the stipulation, by its terms, shows plainly that it was limited to the trial at which it was given, it cannot be used at a subsequent trial.<sup>41</sup>

[a] Stipulation to abide the result of another suit, specifically enforced. Brown v. Arnold, 131 Fed. 723, 67 C. C. A. 125.

[b] Adequacy of Legal Remedy.—An action for damages for the breach of a stipulation that an action at law which has passed to judgment shall abide the final decision of another action is not as practical and efficient to attain the ends of justice as a suit in equity for specific performance of the contract where the final decision of the other action requires a reversal of the judgment. *Brown v. # I. STOCK SUBSCRIPTIONS.—A. REMEDIES OF CORPORATION.

1. Actions To Enforce.—a. In General.—An action at law may be maintained to enforce a subscription to the capital stock of a corporation.<sup>1</sup> The fact that a corporation has a lien on its stock,<sup>2</sup> or that it has, under a statute, the right to forfeit the stock for non-payment of the agreed price,<sup>3</sup> does not affect the right to maintain an action upon the subscription. Unless the terms and conditions of payment of the subscription are fixed by the subscription agreement,<sup>4</sup> the making of a call in accordance with existing statutory or charter provisions is a condition precedent to the maintenance of the action.<sup>5</sup> A demand for payment need not be made after notice of a call has been given,<sup>6</sup> nor when payment is due on or before a specified date.<sup>7</sup> A tender of a certificate of stock need not be made the subscriber,<sup>8</sup> unless the delivery of a certificate is by the agreement expressly made a concurrent act with final payment of the subscription.<sup>9</sup> When the subscription is payable in installments, an action may be maintained on each installment as it falls due,<sup>10</sup> or the total amount may be recovered after all installments have matured.<sup>11</sup> Causes of action against different subscribers, involving similar issues, may in the discretion of the court, be consolidated for trial.<sup>12</sup> or a creditor,<sup>45</sup> the rule is otherwise. Damages to the subscriber from fraud inducing the subscription may be pleaded in recoupment.<sup>46</sup>

2. Forfeiture of Stock.—A right in the corporation to sell and forfeit the stock of a subscriber who is in default under his subscription contract depends entirely upon the existence of a statute or provision in the charter or by-laws of the corporation,<sup>47</sup> or upon the prior consent of the subscriber having been given to a forfeiture, under such circumstances.<sup>48</sup> The remedy by forfeiture is cumulative to the right of the corporation to maintain an action upon the contract of subscription,<sup>49</sup> and, under some statutes, forfeiture proceedings which have been instituted may be abandoned, under specified conditions and an action commenced to recover the amount due.<sup>50</sup> Proceedings to effect a forfeiture of stock must strictly comply with the forms and requirements of the statute or bylaws.<sup>51</sup> After a forfeiture and sale of stock, made in good faith, an action cannot in most jurisdictions be maintained against the subscriber to recover the balance due from him under his subscription,<sup>52</sup> although such a proceeding is permitted in some states.<sup>53</sup> The subscriber's relief against a forfeiture is treated elsewhere in this article.<sup>54</sup>

B. RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF SUBSCRIBER.—1. In General.—If the right of a subscriber who has paid for stock, is denied by the corporation, the value of the stock may be recovered in an action at law,<sup>55</sup> or a stock certificate will be required to be issued by the corporation.<sup>56</sup> A subscriber to stock in a corporation is entitled to receive stock of

If his money is wrongfully diverted, he may maintain an action for money had and received.<sup>60</sup> Specific performance of the contract will sometimes be awarded.<sup>61</sup> A subscription which would operate as a fraud upon other subscribers will not be enforced.<sup>62</sup> Mandamus proceedings cannot be maintained to allow a subscription to stock of a corporation to be made.<sup>63</sup> Where the officers of a corporation fail to collect subscriptions, an action in its name may be maintained by subscribers who have paid for their stock,<sup>64</sup> or possibly mandamus proceedings could be maintained by the stockholders against the directors to compel them to make the collection.<sup>65</sup>

2. Relief From Fraud in Obtaining Subscription.—The remedies generally available to a person who has been induced by fraud to enter into a contract, may be invoked by a subscriber for stock under such circumstances.<sup>66</sup> Thus the subscriber may withdraw from the contract and effectuate a rescission of it by his voluntary act, without taking legal proceedings,<sup>67</sup> and he may then maintain an action to recover the amount he has paid,<sup>68</sup> or he may maintain a suit in equity to have a cancellation and rescission declared,<sup>69</sup> and to recover the amount

II. CORPORATE STOCK. — A. ISSUANCE OF CERTIFICATES.<sup>86</sup>

1. In General. — In many states mandamus may be employed to compel a corporation to issue a stock certificate to the person entitled thereto,<sup>87</sup> though in a few states this remedy is not available.<sup>88</sup> In the latter states the remedy open to the owner of the stock is a suit in equity for specific performance of the express or implied contract of the corporation to issue the certificate.<sup>89</sup> The owner may also, at his

[a] Basis of the Rule.—“In the peculiar condition of business and mining operations in this state, where numerous mining and other corporations are in existence whose stock is often of fluctuating and uncertain value, and where certain kinds of stocks have a peculiar value to those acquainted with their affairs, where the market value of stocks, if any they have, is often difficult to substantiate by competent evidence, and where the risk of the personal responsibility of individuals and corporations is so great, courts should be liberal in extending the full, adequate, and complete relief afforded by a decree of specific performance.” Treasurer v. Commercial etc. Co., 23 Cal. 390, quoted with approval. Gilfallan v. Gilfallan, 168 Cal. 23, 141 Pac. 623.

poration,<sup>71</sup> where a prior right to purchase the stock had been granted the plaintiff,<sup>72</sup> and where the seller is insolvent.<sup>73</sup> A contract with the corporation by which it agrees to issue its stock for services performed or property sold or upon any other adequate consideration is subject to the general principles already stated.<sup>74</sup> Where the stock is held by defendant in trust for the plaintiff, a transfer to him will be required to be made, irrespective of the existence of any peculiar value attaching to the stock.<sup>75</sup>

Specific performance in this class of cases follows the general rule, that a contract to be specifically enforced must be certain,<sup>76</sup> fair,<sup>77</sup> and the consideration adequate.<sup>78</sup>

Mutuality. — While ordinarily a contract which may be specifically enforced at the suit of the vendee may likewise be specifically enforced at the suit of the vendor, upon the doctrine of mutuality of remedies,<sup>79</sup> this rule has been held inapplicable to contracts for the purchase of personal property, such as corporate stocks, where the vendor is entitled only to a recovery of money or of property having an easily ascertainable money value,<sup>80</sup> though there are also authorities upholding

[a] Proceeding in Rem.—An Arizona corporation was organized solely for the purpose of doing business in California where all its property and business was located. It held in its treasury certain unissued stock in trust for its promoter with whom plaintiff had a contract entitling him to a certain number of such shares. In an action against the promoter and the corporation to compel enforcement of the contract and compel issuance of the stock, it was held that service might be had on the promoter, who had absconded, by publication; that under the circumstances the situs of the stock might be deemed to California, and that therefore, the stock or "res" being within the jurisdiction, the action for its delivery was in a sense one in rem. Wait v. Kern River Min. etc. Co., 157 Cal. 16, 106 Pac. 98. Compare Hamil v. Flowers, 133 Ga. 216, 65 S. E. 961.

3. Remedies for Fraud in Inducing Sale.<sup>97</sup> — Where a sale of corporate stock has been induced by fraud, the remedies generally available in the case of fraud and deceit are open to the defrauded party.<sup>98</sup>

[a] An agreement by plaintiff to sell the stock must appear (1) from the complaint. Eustice v. Meytrott, 100 Ark. 510, 140 S. W. 590. (2) It need not, however, be expressly alleged. First Nat. Bank v. Corporation Securities Co., 120 Minn. 105, 139 N. W. 296. See Hardin v. Case, 134 Ga. 813, 68 S. E. 648.

[b] Where a part of the stock has been transferred the judgment may order any deficiency made up from other similar shares of stock owned by the defendant or there may be judgment for their value. Poole v. Camden, 79 W. Va. 310, 92 S. E. 454, L. R. A. 1917E, 988.

[b] Where property is conveyed to a corporation by the plaintiff on the promise of stockholders to transfer certain stock to him, an action for damages may be maintained against the stockholders on their refusal to perform. Uhl v. Gayley, 181 App. Div. 802, 169 N. Y. Supp. 191.

[c] If the contract is entire, and the purchaser has made partial payment, he cannot on a breach by the seller maintain an action to recover the proportion of the stock he has paid for. Reid v. Caldwell, 110 Ga. 481, 35 S. E. 684.

[a] Allegations of fraud inducing the execution of the contract of sale, are irrelevant. Shea v. Kiely, 167 N. Y. Supp. 570.

[b] Excusing Tender.—An allegation that certificates of stock were never delivered to the plaintiff is relevant, as showing why a tender by plaintiff was not made. Shea v. Kiely, 167 N. Y. Supp. 570.

[c] Option in Purchaser to Rescind. Where there is a conditional sale with an option in the purchaser to revoke or rescind the contract, in an action to recover under the agreement the amount due, it is unnecessary to allege facts sustaining an action for damages for a breach of a contract of sale or a suit for specific performance. *Lyons v. [a] Basis of the Right.—"It is one of the well-recognized offices of the remedy by mandamus, to enforce the plain rights of stockholders or members of corporations in the absence of any other adequate remedy." Miller v. Imperial Water Co. No. 8, 156 Cal. 27, 103 Pac. 227.

[b] Reinstatement to membership

association will not usually be protected or enforced by mandamus.<sup>23</sup>

Ordinarily equity will refuse to take jurisdiction over such matters,<sup>24</sup> though equitable relief has sometimes been granted.<sup>25</sup>

B. INSPECTION OF CORPORATE BOOKS AND PROPERTY. — 1. Equitable Remedies. — The remedy by injunction, while open to a stockholder in some jurisdictions, to compel the allowance of his right to inspect corporate records,<sup>26</sup> is usually held to be inadequate to afford the desired relief,<sup>27</sup> mandamus being the more appropriate and more favored remedy.<sup>28</sup> But a domestic corporation may be required by injunction, to keep its books and records in the state and accessible for purposes of inspection.<sup>29</sup> Where an inspection of corporate records becomes desirable and necessary in the course of pending judicial proceedings, it will of course be ordered,<sup>30</sup> and an inspection will also be permitted where a bill seeks both equitable relief and discovery.<sup>31</sup> Refusal of the right to inspect corporate records constitutes no ground for the appointment of a receiver.<sup>32</sup>

2. Mandamus. — a. Right to the Remedy. — Mandamus is the remedy most commonly available to a stockholder to enforce his right to inspect corporate books and records<sup>33</sup> as well as corporate property in a foreign corporation will not ordinarily be ordered. See North State Copper & Gold Min. Co. v. Field, 64 Md. 151, 20 Atl. 1039; Smith v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.) 336.

right to a writ of mandate. In at least one state, however, because of special statutory provisions, mandamus proceedings cannot be maintained.<sup>40</sup> A domestic corporation which keeps its books without the state will be compelled by mandamus to bring them within the state for inspection.<sup>41</sup> If the records of a foreign corporation are kept within the state, mandamus proceedings to obtain an inspection of them may be maintained,<sup>42</sup> but such a corporation cannot be compelled by mandamus to bring its books within the state for this purpose if they are regularly kept elsewhere.<sup>43</sup> But directors of a foreign corporation, who reside and act within the state may be compelled by mandamus to order the corporate agents in another state to permit an inspection of corporate property there located.<sup>44</sup> A right of inspection conferred by a statute of the state of incorporation, will be enforced outside that state.<sup>45</sup>

A state court has jurisdiction to compel a national bank to allow an inspection of its books.<sup>46</sup> Federal courts have no original jurisdiction in mandamus proceedings but can issue the writ as ancillary to an existing jurisdiction.<sup>47</sup>

[a] "The corporation holds its directors' meetings in this state, its directors reside here and the corporate business, in part at least is done here. The corporation, although organized under the laws of Arizona, is for many purposes a resident of this state. . . . Its directors, acting in this state, may make and deliver to the plaintiff an order to the persons in charge of the mine, instructing them to permit the plaintiff to enter and examine the same. In the ordinary course of business it is to be presumed that such an order would be made in this state, rather than in Arizona, since the directors and officers reside here and hold meetings here. There is, therefore, no physical or jurisdictional obstacle to prevent the issuance and execution of a writ of mandate to compel the defendants to perform such act." *Hobbs v. Tom Reed Gold Min. corporation and charged with the performance of a duty to the stockholders, are all residents of this state, and as such board of directors they transact all the business of the corporation, not in Arizona, but in California. The resolution calling the election can be, and, if passed at all, no doubt will be, adopted at a meeting of the board held at its offices in Los Angeles, where it appears all its meetings have been held and all of the corporate acts, other than that here involved, have been performed. Since all of the members of the board of directors reside in this state, wherein all its property is situate and all its corporate business, including that of its board of directors, is transacted, the corporation, although organized under the laws of Arizona, must be deemed a resident of this state and subject to the jurisdiction of the courts thereof. IV. LIABILITIES OF STOCKHOLDERS TO CREDITORS. — A. UPON UNPAID SUBSCRIPTIONS. — 1. Form and Nature of the Remedy.
a. In General. — Creditors of a corporation have the right to assume that the capital stock of a corporation has been or will be fully paid up,<sup>37</sup> and where the full par value of the stock has not been received by the corporation in money or money's worth, payment of the balance will be enforced by the courts at the instance of a creditor who extended his credit without knowledge of the facts and in an appropriate proceeding.<sup>38</sup> In some states, this liability is now embodied in statutes.<sup>39</sup> The right to maintain an action to enforce this liability is not barred by the dissolution of the corporation,<sup>40</sup> nor by the enactment of a statute imposing an additional and different liability upon stockholders,<sup>41</sup> and the cause of action survives the death of the stockholder.<sup>42</sup> The form of remedy to be adopted is governed by the forum

[a] Before action can be maintained by a receiver or trustee of an insolvent corporation against its stockholders (1) the latter must, under some statutes, have had notice and an opportunity to be heard upon the validity of the claims of creditors. Rea v. Eslick, 87 Wash. 125, 151 Pac. 256; Chamberlain v. Piercy, 82 Wash. 157, 143 Pac. 977; Beddow v. Huston, 65 Wash. 585, 118 Pac. 752; Grady v. Graham, 64 Wash. 436, 116 Pac. 1098, 36 L. R. A. Piercy*, 82 Wash. 157, 143 Pac. 977. (3) Compliance with these conditions must appear on the face of the complaint. Rea v. Eslick, 87 Wash. 125, 151 Pac. 256; Chamberlain v. Piercy, 82 Wash. 157, 143 Pac. 977. B. STATUTORY LIABILITIES. — 1. Form and Nature of the Action.

a. In General.—Where a statute prescribes the remedy to be employed, to enforce the stockholder's statutory liability for corporate debts, such remedy is an exclusive one and must be strictly followed.<sup>74</sup> If no remedy is specifically given by the statute, the creditor may employ any remedy suitable to enforce the right.<sup>75</sup> In some states, the stockholder may be joined as a party to the action against the corporation,<sup>76</sup> or brought into the action after judgment has been obtained against the corporation, and execution may be levied against him, after execution against the corporation has been returned unsatisfied.<sup>77</sup> The form of remedy to be employed depends upon the practice and law of the state in which the stockholder is sued and not upon the law of the state of the domicile of the corporation.<sup>78</sup>

In the federal courts, the nature of the remedy, whether at law or in equity depends upon the nature of the remedy given by the statute of the state creating the liability.<sup>79</sup> The liability of the stockholder may be enforced although the corporation has been dissolved,<sup>80</sup> and survives the death of the stockholder.<sup>81</sup>

b. Remedy at Law.—In many states an action at law may be maintained to enforce a stockholder's statutory liability, either by reason of an express statutory designation of such a remedy, or because the nature of the liability created by statute is such as to render the stockholder directly liable to creditors in a manner which the legal remedy is amply able to enforce.<sup>82</sup> In other states under different statutes no

[a] The obligation of the stockholder is contractual and the method of its enforcement depends "not upon the law of the state where the contract is made, but upon that of the state where its enforcement is sought. There can be no vested right in the form of remedy. So that, when a stockholder subscribes to the capital stock of a corporation, he thereby assumes a contractual obligation with the incident that the creditor may pursue him in any jurisdiction where service may be had upon him, and thus necessarily consents to the maintenance of such form of action as the law where the enforcement is sought may permit." 2. Effect of Amendment or Repeal of Statutes. — Where the rights and obligations existing between creditors of a corporation and its stockholders are contractual in their nature, they are governed by the law in force at the time the cause of action accrued against the corporation<sup>90</sup> and cannot be injuriously affected by subsequent legislation.<sup>91</sup> In such case a repeal or modification of a statute affording a creditor a remedy against a stockholder will be effective provided it does not substantially diminish the value of the creditor's right or seriously affect its enforcement;<sup>92</sup> otherwise it will be unconstitutional and void.<sup>93</sup>

3. Where and in What Courts Liability May Be Enforced. — a. In General. — An action to enforce a stockholder's liability is regarded as an action on contract and may be instituted in a court having jurisdiction over contract actions.<sup>94</sup> Where the liability of stockholders is several in its nature, a court whose jurisdiction depends upon the amount in controversy,<sup>95</sup> can take jurisdiction over those defendants only as to which plaintiff demands judgment for an amount within the jurisdiction of the court.<sup>96</sup>

Federal courts have jurisdiction of this class of actions within the limits of the principles applicable to their general jurisdiction.<sup>97</sup>

[a] "The fundamental question is whether there is a substantive right originating in one state and a corresponding liability which follows the person against whom it is sought to be enforced into another state. Such a right, arising under the common law, is enforceable everywhere. Such a right, arising under a local statute, will be enforced ex comitate in another state, unless there is a good reason for refusing to enforce it. It will be enforced, not because of the existence of the statute, but because it is a right which the plaintiff legitimately acquired, and which still belongs to him. If the statute creating the right is against the policy of the law of the neighboring state, that is a sufficient reason for refusing to enforce the right there. In the neighboring state, in such a case, it will not be considered a right. If the enforcement of a statutory right in a neighboring state in the manner proposed will work injustice to its citizens, considerations of limitations and exceptions to the enforcement of rights arising extra-territorially,<sup>99</sup> as where the liability is regarded as penal in its nature,<sup>1</sup> or where the statutory remedy is special and exclusive,<sup>2</sup> or its employment is essential to effectually protect the rights of all persons interested,<sup>3</sup> or where to enforce the liability would be in conflict with the public policy of the state.<sup>4</sup> Where, however, the stockholder's liability is regarded as secondary to that of the corporation and proportional to that of other stockholders, it will not, under the rule of many authorcomity do not require the recognition of it by the courts of that state. If the right by the terms of the statute creating it is to be enforced by prescribed proceedings within the state, the right is limited by the statute, and can only be enforced in accordance with the statute. If it is of such a kind that, with a due regard for the interests of the parties, a proper remedy can be given only in the jurisdiction where it is created, it will not be enforced elsewhere. But if there is a substantive right of a kind which is generally recognized, courts through comity ought to regard it, and enforce it as well when it arises under a statute of another state as when it arises at common law, unless there is some good reason for disregarding it." *Howarth v. [b] Corporation Organized for Foreign Business.—Where the corporation was organized with the expressed intention of doing business in the state in which the action is instituted, there can be no doubt that courts of that state have jurisdiction of the action. Foreign Judgment. — Since full faith and credit must be given to a judgment rendered in another state,<sup>5</sup> its conclusiveness will be determined by the law of the state in which it was rendered,<sup>6</sup> and if it is there conclusive, it will be conclusive elsewhere,<sup>7</sup> in accordance with the general rules elsewhere treated.<sup>8</sup>

10. Judgment. — The form of the judgment will obviously depend largely upon whether the action be by a single creditor or on behalf of all of them and whether one or all of the stockholders be defendants.<sup>9</sup> It should be against each stockholder for the full amount for which he is severally liable,<sup>10</sup> but should provide for the adjustment and enforcement of the liability in accordance with the equities and the law governing its character and extent.<sup>11</sup>

C. INSOLVENCY OR RECEIVERSHIP.—1. In General.—The right to enforce the unpaid subscription liability of a stockholder is usually held to constitute a corporate asset and to vest in an assignee, trustee in bankruptcy or receiver of an insolvent corporation,<sup>12</sup> though there are some authorities which hold otherwise.<sup>13</sup> Existence of a remedy at law or in equity does not deprive a receiver of power to enforce the stockholders' liability in the insolvency proceedings.<sup>14</sup> The mere appointment of a receiver for an insolvent corporation does not prevent the maintenance of an action by a creditor against the stockholders;<sup>15</sup> but if the receiver is authorized and directed to enforce the stockholders' liability a creditor will not be allowed to sue the stockholder.<sup>16</sup>

The statutory liability of stockholders is not, in most states, regarded as an asset of the corporation and cannot be enforced by a receiver of the corporation,<sup>17</sup> and in such states the fact that the corporation's

[a] Rule Stated.—“When insolvency and exhaustion of assets exist, the unpaid capital is not available to any one creditor in satisfaction of his debt, because then the whole amount of the unpaid capital is a trust fund which does not belong to the corporation, but to the whole body of its creditors. Hence, whether the proceeding originates in the name of one, or of several, or of all the creditors, the result is the same in each. The capital, when recovered, enures to the benefit of all, and must be distributed among all ratably. Before any recovery can be had in such proceedings, no matter of what particular form, there must be an assessment made by a competent authority. The necessity for an

clearly appears that the entire amount of the stockholder's indebtedness will be required to satisfy the liabilities of the corporation.<sup>38</sup> Where an assessment is necessary, a court of equity will require the making of a call by directors,<sup>39</sup> or the assessment may be levied by the court in which the affairs of the insolvent corporation are being settled,<sup>40</sup> either upon a petition by the receiver in the insolvency proceeding,<sup>41</sup> or in an independent suit.<sup>42</sup> The corporation is a necessary party to the suit.<sup>43</sup> Where the affairs of an insolvent corporation are being liquidated, no notice of the assessment proceedings need be given the stockholders,<sup>44</sup> and personal defenses which they may have will not be passed upon.<sup>45</sup> Since stockholders are represented by the corporation in such proceedings an assessment when levied is binding upon all stockholders as far as the question of the necessity for the assessment and its amount is concerned,<sup>46</sup> as well as the legal right assessment arises from the consideration that only so much of the unpaid capital can be called in as is required for the payment of the unsatisfied debts. If the whole unpaid capital is not required the whole cannot be called. In order to ascertain how much is required there must be an account of debts, assets, and unpaid capital taken, and then a decree for an assessment of the amount due by each stockholder." Lane's Appeal, 105 Pa. 49, 65, 51 Am. In a few states, statutes exist which regulate the procedure for the levying of an assessment.<sup>53</sup>

An assessment by a receiver or a designated state or by a federal officer, upon the stockholders of an insolvent bank, is sometimes authorized by statute.<sup>54</sup>

G. LIABILITY FOR CORPORATE ASSETS RECEIVED UPON DISTRIBUTION.

1. In General.—A creditor may maintain an action to recover from a stockholder assets of the corporation distributed by it while insolvent and before the claims of corporate creditors had been settled.<sup>55</sup> In some states the right to maintain such an action vests in a receiver of the corporate property and assets.<sup>56</sup> All the stockholders need not be made parties to the action,<sup>57</sup> though several stockholders may properly be joined in one action.<sup>58</sup> The corporation or its representative is a necessary party to the action.<sup>59</sup>

2. Previous Judgment Against Corporation.—Before the action can be maintained it is necessary for a judgment against the corporation to have been obtained and execution returned unsatisfied,<sup>60</sup> unless the fact of insolvency of the corporation or its dissolution clearly appears. The judgment rendered against the corporation is conclusive as to the validity and amount of the creditor's claim.<sup>61</sup>

H. LIABILITY AS PARTNERS.—The associates of a business which for some legal reason fails or ceases to become or remain a corporation may be liable to its creditors as partners,<sup>62</sup> and a creditor who has

I. LOCATION AND CONSTRUCTION.—The procedure to be followed in obtaining the right to locate and construct a street railroad system is governed by the statutes of the various states.<sup>1</sup> Such matters are now, in many states, within the jurisdiction of public service commissions.<sup>2</sup> Location or construction of the system in accordance with the requirements of existing laws will be enforced by mandamus,<sup>3</sup> or by a suit in equity.<sup>4</sup> Contracts with a municipality in regard to the manner of construction will be enforced,<sup>5</sup> or damages awarded for their breach.<sup>6</sup> Interference with the lawful construction of a street railway will be enjoined.<sup>7</sup>

II. REGULATION AND CONTROL.—A street railway company like other public service corporations, is subject to regulation and control by the legally constituted public authorities.<sup>8</sup> The performance of its public duties may be enforced by mandamus.<sup>9</sup> The extension of existing lines may also be compelled by mandamus where the legal duty to make the extension rests upon the company.<sup>10</sup>

III. RAILROAD CROSSINGS.—The crossing in a public street of a steam railroad or of another street railroad by a street railroad will not ordinarily be enjoined.<sup>11</sup> The determination of the place and mode of such crossings is a matter sometimes placed by statute within the jurisdiction of particular courts,<sup>12</sup> or of the various public service commissions.<sup>13</sup>

I. STRIKING OUT PLEADINGS OR PARTS THEREOF. — A.

GENERALLY. — Courts have inherent power to strike out improper pleadings, or parts thereof,<sup>1</sup> and statutes frequently provide that sham and irrelevant answers and irrelevant and redundant matter inserted in a pleading may be stricken out on such terms as the court may, in its discretion, impose.<sup>2</sup>

There is a distinction between a demurrer and a motion to strike out,<sup>3</sup> though the motion is sometimes in effect a demurrer,<sup>4</sup> and may be treated as such.<sup>5</sup> Like a demurrer, it admits<sup>6</sup> for the purpose of

2. See generally the statutes and the titles "Frivolous and Sham Pleadings;" "Surplusage and Scandal."

3. See 6 STANDARD PROC. 851.

[a] Where a single feature of a pleading is objected to, a motion to strike, not a demurrer is proper. Hall v. O'Neil Turp. Co., 56 Fla. 324, 47 So. 609.

4. Shohoney v. Quincy O. & K. C.

R. Co., 231 Mo. 131, 132 S. W. 1059; Bank of Commerce v. Fuqua, 11 Mont. 285, 293, 28 Pac. 291, 28 Am. St. Rep. 461, 14 L. R. A. 538.

the motion, the truth of all facts well pleaded, and has been held to search the record.<sup>7</sup>

B. WHO MAY PROCURE AND WHO MAY MAKE ORDERS STRIKING OUT. Pleadings or parts thereof may be stricken out on motion of an adverse party,<sup>8</sup> or even a co-party.<sup>9</sup> And some statutes provide the motion must be made by a party aggrieved.<sup>10</sup>

The court may strike out improper pleadings or parts thereof on its own motion.<sup>11</sup> But a court cannot strike a pleading from the files in vacation.<sup>12</sup>

A court commissioner has no power to strike out pleadings or parts thereof.<sup>13</sup>

D. STRIKING OUT ENTIRE PLEADINGS.—1. Grounds Generally. It is proper to strike out an unauthorized pleading,<sup>15</sup> a pleading filed without leave of court, when leave is required,<sup>16</sup> a pleading filed by a stranger to the action,<sup>17</sup> a pleading consisting merely of averments or denials of conclusions of law,<sup>18</sup> an answer filed after entry of defendant's default,<sup>19</sup> an answer setting up issues already adjudicated on a demurrer to the petition,<sup>20</sup> and a plea or answer setting up a parol agreement inconsistent with the contract sued on.<sup>21</sup> Subsequent pleadings of a party which are mere repetitions of his previous pleadings may be stricken out.<sup>22</sup>

Multifariousness, according to some authorities, may be questioned by motion to strike.<sup>23</sup> But an entire pleading cannot be stricken out because of indefiniteness and uncertainty,<sup>24</sup> or of redundancy.<sup>25</sup> Nor ought a court to strike a pleading from the files for defects in the caption,<sup>26</sup> or for mere formal defects in the arrangement of the pleading,<sup>27</sup> without at least giving the party an opportunity to amend.<sup>28</sup>

23. Waldo v. Thweatt, 64 Ark. 126, 40 S. W. 782. And see generally the title "Multifariousness."

24. Computing Scales Co. v. Long, 66 S. C. 379, 44 S. E. 963, 65 L. R. A. 294.

As to proper remedy, see 4 STANDARD PROC. 859.

25. See the title "Surplusage and Scandal."

26. Butcher v. Bank of Brownsville, 2 Kan. 70, 83 Am. Dec. 446, where word "petition" was omitted from caption.

[a] Where Party's Christian Name Is Designated by Initials.—Taylor v. Insley, 7 Colo. App. 175, 42 Pac. 1046.

[b] But omission to entitle a declaration of a particular term is ground for setting it aside. Niblock v. Wright, 2 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 251.

28. Butcher v. Bank of Brownsville, 2 Kan. 70, 83 Am. Dec. 446.

But a conclusion with a verification instead of to the country has been held ground for striking a plea.<sup>29</sup>

Unconformity to Process. — In some states a motion to strike out is a proper remedy where the declaration or complaint does not substantially conform to the process previously filed.<sup>30</sup>

Frivolous and Sham Pleading. — A sham<sup>31</sup> or frivolous<sup>32</sup> pleading may be stricken out. But an answer should not be stricken out at the trial on proof of the falsity of its averments.<sup>33</sup>

Laches and Limitation of Actions. — As a general rule the defense of the statute of limitation of actions cannot be raised by motion to strike out,<sup>34</sup> though the defense of laches may sometimes be raised in this manner.<sup>35</sup>

Departure. — A departure in pleading may be taken advantage of by motion to strike out.<sup>36</sup>

Surplusage and Scandal. — The right to strike out pleadings because of surplusage and scandalous matter is treated elsewhere in this work.<sup>37</sup>

2. Tardy Pleadings. — A pleading which has been filed too late, may be stricken out.<sup>38</sup> But it is error to strike out a pleading, filed on time, because of delay in serving it.<sup>39</sup>

3. Because of Insufficiency of Pleading. — Motions to strike out pleadings or parts thereof are ordinarily directed at defects of form,<sup>40</sup> plaintiff, as he is always in court under compulsion.<sup>53</sup> It is therefore held that a court has no power at law or in equity to strike out the answer of a defendant and render judgment against him for disobedience to a court order.<sup>54</sup> But some courts hold his answer may be

[a] The reason a plaintiff's pleading may be stricken is that he is always a voluntary actor, and it is manifestly just and proper that in asking the aid of a court, he should submit himself to all its legitimate orders. O'Neill v. Thomas Day Co., 152 Cal. 357, 92 Pac. 856, 14 Ann. Cas. 970.

[a] Reason.—The fundamental conception of a court of justice is condemnation only after hearing. To say that courts have inherent power to deny all right to defend an action and to render decrees without any hearing whatever is to convert the court into an instrument of wrong and oppression. Furthermore due process of law signifies a right to be heard in one's defense. Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 409, 17 Sup. Ct. 841, 42 L. ed. 215. See also O'Neill v. Thomas Day Co., 152 Cal. 357, 92 Pac. 856, 14 Ann. Cas. 970.

[b] Rule in Equity.—"There is no basis for the assertion that the courts of chancery in England claimed or exercised the power, after answer filed, to decree pro confesso on the merits against a defendant, merely because he persisted in disobedience to an order of the court, though the cases do show that the chancery courts commonly refused to hear a defendant in contempt when asking at their hands a favor. . . . The general rule is, that when a party is in contempt, he will not be allowed to oppose the relief sought by the plaintiff, by contradicting the allegations in his bill, or bringing forward any defense, or alleging new facts, neither will he be heard by affidavit, except it be made with a view of purging his contempt, but he may be heard to direct the attention of the court to any error or insufficiency in the plaintiff's own case as made by the bill. . . . Of course refusal to allow a party to move until he has answered, and when he was in default for not answering, cannot possibly be construed as supporting the contention that when a defendant had regularly answered his answer might be stricken from the files, and the case be decided as though no answer had ever been filed." (Quoting Anon v. Lord, Gort. (Eng.) 77.) Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 409, 423, 427, 428, 17 Sup. Ct. 841, 42 L. ed. 215.

S.) 1062, note. See Larson v. Larson, 9 S. D. 1, 67 N. W. 842. (2) Contra, Zimmerman v. Zimmerman, 7 Mont. 114, 14 Pac. 665 (where the defendant was a nonresident); Walker v. Walker, 82 N. Y. 260; Quigley v. Quig- stricken out in equity.<sup>55</sup> Striking out an answer as mere punishment for disobedience of an order is a violation of the constitutional provision as to due process.<sup>56</sup> But the court has power to strike out an answer on disobedience of an order to give or produce evidence, because the defendant's refusal raises a presumption of the untruth of his answer.<sup>57</sup>

E. STRIKING OUT PARTS OF PLEADINGS.<sup>58</sup> — The power of the court to strike out parts of pleadings is a power that should be exercised with caution,<sup>59</sup> and it has been held that such motions should be discouraged except where the substantial rights of a party are affected.<sup>60</sup> The only advantage of moving to strike out the objectionable matter is to enable the party to know in advance whether he must be prepared to meet the averment and disprove it by evidence.<sup>61</sup> Sometimes portions of a pleading are stricken after verdict for the purpose of sustaining the verdict.<sup>62</sup>

It is proper to strike out frivolous and irrelevant matter in pleading,<sup>63</sup>

ley, 45 Hun 23. And (3) compare Peel v. Peel, 50 Iowa 521, query. However, if the power does exist, it can be exerted only in extreme cases when other punishment cannot be inflicted or will not enforce obedience. See also 7 STANDARD PROC. 829.

b. When Made and Waived.—A motion to strike out must be made at the proper time or the right to do so will be deemed waived.<sup>92</sup> As a general rule, a motion to strike out a pleading because of formal defects,<sup>93</sup> or to strike irrelevant and redundant matter from a pleading,<sup>94</sup> must be made before filing a pleading thereto raising issues of law or fact, and should not be filed simultaneously with a demurrer.<sup>95</sup> But scandal is an offense upon the court which may be corrected at any time.<sup>96</sup> A motion to strike which has been filed is not waived by the subsequent filing of a demurrer<sup>97</sup> or answer,<sup>98</sup> or by noticing the case for trial.<sup>99</sup>

Such motions should be brought to a hearing before the case is called for trial.<sup>1</sup>

c. Notice.—A motion to strike must be made on notice.<sup>2</sup>

d. Hearing and Determination.—Where the motion is grounded upon matters which may not appear from the pleadings or record, of which the court takes judicial notice, it may be supported and resisted

by affidavits.<sup>3</sup> Such motions are addressed to the discretion of the court,<sup>4</sup> and in granting relief terms may be imposed.<sup>5</sup> If the motion is too broad in its scope it must be overruled though a narrower motion might have been granted.<sup>6</sup> The order is framed in accordance with general rules elsewhere treated.<sup>7</sup>

2. Judgment by Default and Pleading Over.—If the stricken pleading is a demurrer or answer, judgment by default may be rendered for want of pleading,<sup>8</sup> unless the court allows the party to plead over, as it seems it may do, especially where the motion is in effect a demurrer,<sup>9</sup> though, as a reason for holding that the sufficiency of a pleading cannot be attacked by motion to strike, it has been stated that this remedy would cut off the right of amendment.<sup>10</sup>

By filing a new pleading in place of the one stricken, a party waives any error in the court's ruling.<sup>11</sup>

[a] But an order denying a motion to set aside an ex parte order striking an appeal cannot be taken from a refusal to strike.<sup>14</sup> But such orders may be reviewed on appeal from the judgment.<sup>15</sup> In some jurisdictions, however, the trial court must, by motion for new trial, be first asked to review its order.<sup>16</sup>

b. Exceptions and Record.—Unless deemed excepted to by statute,<sup>17</sup> exceptions to the ruling on the motion must be taken and saved by bill of exceptions.<sup>18</sup> As a general rule a pleading which is stricken out is no longer part of the record,<sup>19</sup> and must be made a part thereof by a bill of exceptions,<sup>20</sup> or by order of the court that it shall be made so.<sup>21</sup> But in some states a pleading which has been stricken out is still a part of the judgment roll.<sup>22</sup> Unless otherwise provided by statute,<sup>23</sup> the notice of motion to strike out a pleading or a part thereof,<sup>24</sup> the motion,<sup>25</sup> the affidavit accompanying it,<sup>26</sup> and the affidavit of service,<sup>27</sup> and the ruling on the motion,<sup>28</sup> are not parts of the judgment roll and, to be considered on appeal, must be brought in by bill of exceptions or statement of case,<sup>29</sup> or by an order of court making them a part of the record.<sup>30</sup> But when the proceedings are shown by the journal entry of the judgment it has been held a bill of exceptions is not necessary.<sup>31</sup>

c. Review.—The motion to strike being addressed to the court's discretion, the action of the court will be inquired into only to determine whether its discretion has been abused to the injury of the party.<sup>32</sup> If the action of the court, though error, was harmless, it will not be reversed.<sup>33</sup> Thus a refusal to strike out portions of a pleading is harmless error where no improper issues are submitted to the jury,<sup>34</sup> or where the complaining party is not embarrassed in the preparation of his defense.<sup>35</sup>

II. WITHDRAWAL OF PLEADINGS.<sup>36</sup> — A. GENERALLY.

Upon a timely application,<sup>37</sup> and a proper showing,<sup>38</sup> a court may in its discretion allow the withdrawal of pleadings filed in a case,<sup>39</sup> upon such terms as it deems proper.<sup>40</sup> Leave of court is essential,<sup>41</sup> and in some states the consent of the opposite party is also required.<sup>42</sup>

As a general rule, at any time before submission to the jury, a party should be allowed to withdraw a cause of action or defense which he does not desire to maintain.<sup>43</sup> The court may allow withdrawal of demurrer or answer to enable a party to file a motion to strike out,<sup>44</sup> or to plead the bar of the statute of limitations.<sup>45</sup> So also it may allow the withdrawal of an answer to file a demurrer,<sup>46</sup> or to amend the answer,<sup>47</sup> the withdrawal of plea of not guilty to file disclaimer,<sup>48</sup> or of a plea in abatement to file an answer,<sup>49</sup> or the withdrawal of a replication to amend the bill.<sup>50</sup>

B. WHO MAY WITHDRAW.—A party may withdraw his pleading without acting through his attorney.<sup>51</sup> An attorney may withdraw the defendant's answer and appearance and suffer default when done to subserve the interests or to comply with the wishes of his client.<sup>52</sup> But the court cannot require the withdrawal of a demurrer.<sup>53</sup> Nor can a party require the withdrawal of his adversary's pleading.<sup>54</sup> And one of several co-parties cannot withdraw the joint answer to the prejudice of his co-parties.<sup>55</sup>

C. EFFECT OF WITHDRAWAL.—A withdrawal of a pleading removes it from consideration of the parties as though it had never been filed,<sup>56</sup> but the party is still entitled to notice of proceedings in the action.<sup>57</sup> The withdrawal, after demurrer overruled, of an answer filed with the demurrer, is not a confession of judgment.<sup>58</sup>

D. REFILING WITHDRAWN PLEADING. — If a party relies on a pleading which he has withdrawn, he must refile it.<sup>59</sup> But if the allegations of the pleading were controverted before withdrawal, a second traverse is not necessary after it has been refiled.<sup>60</sup>

I. DEFINITION, CLASSIFICATION AND PURPOSE.—Exclusive of its use in equity as a process to compel appearance and answer,<sup>1</sup> a subpoena is a judicial process<sup>2</sup> by which the attendance of a witness is required. It is a writ or order directed to a person and requiring his attendance at a particular time and place to testify as a witness,<sup>3</sup> and prescribing a penalty for disobedience.<sup>4</sup> Such subpoenas are of two general classes,<sup>5</sup> the subpoena ad testificandum which requires only that the witness appear and testify,<sup>6</sup> and the subpoena duces tecum which contains the added requirement that the witness produce certain books or papers.<sup>7</sup>

ity,<sup>10</sup> has the power to establish and enforce subrogation,<sup>11</sup> the doctrine being originally, and, in some states, even now, one exclusively of equity cognizance.<sup>12</sup> Of recent years, however, courts of law have exercised jurisdiction over subrogation,<sup>13</sup> particularly under the codes,<sup>14</sup> and the power has been conferred upon law courts in particular cases, by statute.<sup>15</sup>

A probate court has power to subrogate,<sup>16</sup> except in states where the subject is cognizable alone in courts having equitable jurisdiction.<sup>17</sup>

I. ACTIONS GENERALLY.—A subscription, in so far as it is a contract, may be enforced in the same manner as other contracts.<sup>1</sup> An action to recover the amount of a subscription may be brought, according to the circumstances of the case, either in equity,<sup>2</sup> or at law.<sup>3</sup>

[f] Criminal Cases.—The statute providing for substitution of attorneys does not apply to criminal cases. Ex parte Clarke, 62 Cal. 490.

[g] Basis of Principle.—Although sometimes based upon the relation existing between the attorney, or solicitor, and client, the rule rests with equal applicability upon the relation between the parties to the suit. An attorney, or solicitor, may no more withdraw his appearance from the records, without an order of court authorizing it, except with the consent of the adverse party, than he may without the consent of his client, or than his client may substitute another attorney or solicitor in his place, without his consent. Chicago Public Stock Exchange v. McLaughry, 50 Ill. App. 358.

Under some statutes the motion for a substitution may be made by the client,<sup>8</sup> while others provide that it may be made by either client or attorney.<sup>9</sup>

Notice of application by the client, for an order of substitution, must be served upon the attorney.<sup>10</sup> But a formal notice is not necessary.<sup>11</sup>

Such motion is ordinarily granted as a matter of course,<sup>12</sup> unless there is some good reason for refusing the order;<sup>13</sup> yet the right to control the substitution of attorneys is said to be within the sound discretion of the court,<sup>14</sup> especially when the moving party is a receiver appointed by the court to which the motion is made.<sup>15</sup>

The application may be withdrawn upon reimbursing the opposite party his costs,<sup>16</sup> even after the attorney's compensation has been determined or reported by a referee.<sup>17</sup>

C. PAYMENT OR SECURITY OF ATTORNEY'S FEES.—In a pending proceeding the court may order a substitution of attorneys before the

E. NOTICE BY ADVERSE PARTY REQUESTING SUBSTITUTION.—Statutes sometimes provide that when an attorney dies or is disbarred or suspended, or ceases to act as such, the adverse party, before taking further proceedings must notify the party for whom the attorney was acting, to appoint another attorney or appear in person.<sup>39</sup>

II. SUBSTITUTION AFTER JUDGMENT.—Unless required by statute, or other rule of law, giving an attorney a special interest in the judgment,<sup>40</sup> an order of substitution of attorneys, as a general rule, is unnecessary after judgment.<sup>41</sup> A client may, therefore, employ a new attorney, without requesting a formal substitution, to enforce a judgment,<sup>42</sup> or appeal therefrom,<sup>43</sup> or enter satisfaction thereof,<sup>44</sup> to move for a new trial,<sup>45</sup> or open a default.<sup>46</sup>

III. ANNULMENT OF ORDER.—When a client obtains an order of substitution without sufficient notice to his attorney, the order may be objected to and set aside on motion of the aggrieved attorney,<sup>47</sup> but not of the party who obtained the order.<sup>48</sup>

IV. APPEAL.—An application for substitution of attorneys is a of notice of appeal without objection that it was signed by new counsel, is a waiver. Livermore v. Webb, 56 Cal. 489; Withers v. Little, 56 Cal. 370.

special proceeding and the court's decision therein is a final judgment from which an appeal lies,<sup>49</sup> to which appeal the general rules relating to appeals are applicable.<sup>50</sup>

V. EFFECT OF SUBSTITUTION.—When an order authorizing a substitution of attorneys has been obtained, and notice thereof served upon the adverse party, the new attorney assumes all the rights, powers, duties and obligations of the former attorney relating to the case.<sup>51</sup> The authority of the former attorney, as a rule, ceases upon the filing of the motion for substitution,<sup>52</sup> or upon signing the consent,<sup>53</sup> and the giving of the requisite notice to the adverse party,<sup>54</sup> and a motion made by him, relating to the case generally, should not be entertained.<sup>55</sup> Having obtained a judgment, he cannot, in opposition to the wishes of his client, collect more than enough to satisfy his lien,<sup>56</sup> and if he attempts to do so he may be enjoined.<sup>57</sup> The adverse party, upon receiving notice of substitution, may recognize the new attorney, and, in the absence of information impugning the validity of the order, proceed to deal with him.<sup>58</sup>

50. See the title "Appeals" and infra, this note.

[a] Presumptions.—In the absence of affirmative proof in the record to the contrary, it will be presumed on appeal that notice of the motion for substitution was served upon the former attorney. Gill v. Southern Pac. Co., 174 Cal. 84, 161 Pac. 1153.

[b] Review of Discretionary Matters.—The exercise of the court's discretion in granting or refusing an order of substitution of attorneys, unless clearly abused, will not be reviewed on appeal. Kelly v. Horsely, 147 Ala. 508, 41 So. 902.

Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Adamant Mfg. Co.*, 60 Minn. 127, 61 N. W. 1024.

[b] Withdrawal of briefs on appeal will not be permitted an attorney who, having entered into a dispute with his client, withdraws from the case. While counsel may sever his personal connection with the case at any time, the business of the court will not be permitted to be delayed by the withdrawal of briefs which have been filed. *La Cotts v. But see Kline v. Stein, 46 Wash. 546, 90 Pac. 1041, 123 Am. St. Rep. 940, plaintiff's remedy is by vacating the judgment.

[a] A judgment in an action for trespass by a stallion breaking into plaintiff's premises is not a bar to a subsequent action for damages occasioned by reason of the horse getting the plaintiff's mare with a foal, for the reason that the subject matter of the present action did not exist at the time of the former suit and could not have been within the issues. Hagan v. Casey, 30 Wis. 553.

[b] When a party, ignorant of the number of hogs stolen from him, discovers some and replevies them, and then afterwards learns of the conversion of others by the defendant, he may sue for their value. The rule is that a party should not be precluded in consequence of a former action, if such action were brought in unavoidable igown negligence.<sup>5</sup> If the defendant's conduct, either in perpetrating the wrong or subsequently, is such that the plaintiff is misled as to the full extent of his damage,<sup>6</sup> or where a judgment for part of a claim is entered by agreement under a mutual mistake of fact,<sup>7</sup> the judgment in such action will not operate as a bar to an action on the balance of the claim.

III. APPLICATIONS OF THE RULE. — A. GENERALLY. — The rule against splitting of causes is rigidly applied and enforced in common law actions,<sup>8</sup> but courts of equity are not so strict in its enforcement.<sup>9</sup> The rule applies only to entire claims which are single and indivisible in nature.<sup>10</sup> It does not preclude a prosecution of several actions upon several causes of action,<sup>11</sup> or require a joinder of every demand which may be joined.<sup>12</sup> It does not prevent the plaintiff from suing for a part of his demand,<sup>13</sup> but bars a recovery on the balance due at the time of the first action, the whole demand being treated as merged in the judgment.<sup>14</sup>

[b] Misrepresentation. — A judgment of dismissal with prejudice on a settlement of an action for damages for injuries to plaintiff's legs is not a bar to a subsequent action for injuries to plaintiff's eyes not included in the former action because of false representations of defendant's doctor that the injury was temporary. *Vine-seck v. B. TO COUNTERCLAIMS AND SET-OFFS. — A person cannot maintain an action for the recovery of the balance of a claim, a portion of which has been used as a recoupment or set-off in a former suit,<sup>15</sup> unless, it has been held, the claim exceeds the plaintiff's demand and the defendant is not permitted to obtain an affirmative judgment.<sup>16</sup>

C. PARTIAL ASSIGNMENTS. — A plaintiff cannot by partial assignments of an entire cause of action split his demand and authorize separate actions upon it,<sup>17</sup> unless the defendant consents thereto.<sup>18</sup> But a partial recovery may be had in a court of equity without the debtor's assent.<sup>19</sup>

D. TESTS. — The courts have applied a number of tests in determining whether there is one cause of action which has been split, or whether there are two causes of action on which separate actions may be brought.<sup>20</sup>

[a] "The principle upon which a party creating a continuing nuisance is held liable to successive actions . . . is that he . . . is under legal obligation to remove, change, or repair the structure or thing complained of . . . and, failing so to do, each day's continuance of the nuisance is a repetition of the original wrong and a new action will lie therefor." Harvey v. Mason City & F. D. R. Co., 129 Iowa 465, 473, 105 N. W. 958, 113 Am. St. Rep. 483, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 973.

[b] Amplification of Rule.—Where the structure is permanent in character, and its structure and maintenance are not necessarily injurious, but may or may not be so, the injury to be compensated in a suit is only the damage which has happened, and there may be as many successive recoveries as there are successive injuries. Troy v. Cheshire R. Co., 23 N. H. 83, 55 Am. Dec. 177.

[c] An illustration of the distinction, between damages which give rise to successive actions and those which do not, is in the case of the construction of a milldam across the course of a stream. So far as the dam operates to permanently overflow the land of another and take away from the owner all beneficial use of his property, the damage may be regarded as original and all recovered in one action. But so far as it may cause only a periodical or occasional flooding, the damage is continuing and successive recoveries can be had. Harvey v. Mason City & F. D. R. Co., 129 Iowa 465, 105 N. W. 958, 113 Am. St. Rep. 483, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 973.

H. LIENS. — The general rules as to splitting causes of action apply to lien suits.<sup>54</sup> But the rule does not require one with separate liens on the same property to present more than one in a single suit.<sup>55</sup>

I. CAUSES OF ACTION IN FAVOR OF OR AGAINST SEVERAL PERSONS. The rule against splitting causes of action applies where the cause is in favor of several persons jointly,<sup>56</sup> or against several persons jointly.<sup>57</sup> But it does not apply to several suits against joint and several debtors or obligors,<sup>58</sup> or prevent suing joint tortfeasors separately.<sup>59</sup> If the rights of different persons are violated by a single tortious act,<sup>60</sup> or if rights of a person in different capacities are affected,<sup>61</sup> separate causes of action arise, which may be sued on separately.

IV. OBJECTIONS.<sup>62</sup> — The pendency of a suit for a part of the cause of action may be pleaded in abatement of suits for the remaining parts,<sup>63</sup> and a recovery of a part of the cause of action in a previous suit may be pleaded in bar.<sup>64</sup> Where formal pleadings are not required, the objection may be raised in a proper case by demurrer to the evidence,<sup>65</sup> or by motion to strike out evidence.<sup>66</sup>

[a] Even though the code may not provide that every remedy other than

Such a special proceeding, therefore, is a remedy,<sup>67</sup> and the term is used in contradistinction to the term "action,"<sup>68</sup> and it is distinct from a motion.<sup>69</sup> Being a "remedy," a special proceeding must be prosecuted for the protection or enforcement of a right or the redress of a wrong.<sup>70</sup> The term implies that there is a legal controversy existing between the parties.<sup>71</sup> It has been held it always has reference to a proceeding in a court,<sup>72</sup> and the proceeding is usually civil in nature.<sup>73</sup>

2. Distinguished From Actions.—The distinction between "actions" and "special proceedings" is sometimes difficult.<sup>74</sup> The division is not between ex parte and adversary proceedings,<sup>75</sup> nor is the designation of the parties as plaintiff and defendant determinative that the proceeding is an action.<sup>76</sup> The distinction seems to rest upon the fact that the former is an ordinary proceeding whereas the latter is not.<sup>77</sup> Therefore any proceeding in a court which was not, under the common law and equity practice, either an action at law or suit in equity is a special proceeding;<sup>78</sup> and any proceeding that under the old mode an action is a special proceeding, such is the case. Methodist Episcopal Church Miss. Soc. v. Ely, 56 Ohio St. 405, 47 N. E. 537.

[b] Illustrations.—Proceedings for a change of name, or in arbitration, or for a voluntary dissolution of a corporation, or for a guardianship, or for a married woman to become a sole trader are special proceedings of a civil nature. In the Matter of Hume, 56 Cal. Dec. 510, 176 Pac. 681.

[a] Reason.—Where the judgment is void and the member treats it as such, he continues to be a member, and need not seek reinstatement. Hoeffner v. Grand Lodge, 41 Mo. App. 359.

[b] The case "may be likened to a judgment rendered by a court which has no jurisdiction of the subject-matter or the person. No appeal or writ of error is necessary to get rid of such a judgment; it is void in all courts and places." Hall v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 24 Fed. 450, 454; Knights of Pythias v. [c] Where no notice of the proceedings is given, resort to the remedies within the order is not a prerequisite. Kulberg v. National Council, 124 Minn. 437, 145 N. W. 120.

[d] Acquiescence and Resistance of Expulsion.—(1) If the member continues to tender his dues when payable, he manifests his disavowance of the order of expulsion and may sue for the benefits without exhausting his remedies in the order. So also he may sue where he resists expulsion and fails to pay subsequent dues because not demanded. But when he takes no steps to secure reinstatement and when he is notified of an assessment upon his certificate and fails to pay it, he may be held to have acquiesced in the expulsion. Glardon v. Supreme Lodge, 50 Mo. App. 45. (2) A clear indication of an intention to refuse further recognition of the assured's membership renders a subsequent tender of dues unnecessary. Kulberg v. National Council, 124 Minn. 437, 145 N. plance with it is excused for some reason.<sup>41</sup> If the contract provides that the decision of the tribunal of the order shall be final, and if the contract is held to be valid, the member cannot resort to the courts after an adverse decision on the merits, in the absence of fraud and mistake.<sup>42</sup> But if the contract is held to be void in so far as it makes such decisions conclusive,<sup>43</sup> the member is not required as a condition precedent to exhaust his remedy within the order before suing for benefits.<sup>44</sup> An agreement to submit certain facts to arbitration is valid and a compliance therewith is a condition precedent to the action.<sup>45</sup> Where the tribunals of the order are open only to members, a beneficiary who is not a member need not exhaust remedies in the order before bringing an action for benefits.<sup>46</sup>

[a] Contracts Distinguished.—(1) If, in a contract creating a definite legal obligation to pay a certain sum of money on a specified contingency, there is embodied an agreement that the rights of the parties shall be determined by arbitration and that no action shall be brought, the agreement does not preclude an action on the contract. But this case is distinguishable from those where the agreement provides only for the determination by arbitration of some particular fact or facts, and those where the contract is to pay only such sum as shall be determined by the arbitrators. Whitney v. National Masonic Acc. Assn., 52 Minn. 378, 54 N. W. 184. (2) "If the constitution or agreement provides for the determination only of some particular fact or facts, or of a question where no obligation to pay a fixed sum is expressed in the contract, or where no particular thing is to be done, but only such sum is to be paid, or such thing is to be done, as may be determined by the arbitrators, then, in such and like cases, the provision or agreement to submit is binding, in the absence of fraud. The case at bar must be distinguished from these classes of cases, however, for here the sum to be paid is definite; and the constitution, which provides, in general terms, that all claims and rights of members and beneficiaries shall be submitted to the board of arbitration of its own creation and that its decision shall be final and conclusive, is legally ineffectual to bar this action. The rule of law is well settled that in such a case an agreement to arbitrate does not preclude the parties to it from resorting to their legal remedies. Nor is a submission to arbitration, under such an agreement, a condition precedent to the bringing of an action." Daniher v. Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., 10 Utah 110, 122, 37 Pac. 245.

e. Action for Injunction Against Assessments.—The method of raising funds to carry out its benevolent purposes is a matter of policy, and an injunction suit against the collection of an assessment will not lie until exhaustion of remedies provided by the order.<sup>47</sup>

f. Exceptions to Rules Requiring Exhaustion of Remedy in Association.—There are exceptions to the rule requiring the exhaustion of remedies in benefit associations.<sup>48</sup> Thus although the rule may be applicable to a particular case, the courts may be resorted to in the first instance where no right of appeal or remedy is provided for a particular case,<sup>49</sup> or when the rules are unreasonable, or in violation of the law,<sup>50</sup> or when the remedy by appeal is inadequate,<sup>51</sup> or where the right of appeal exists only as a matter of favor,<sup>52</sup> or where the conduct of the society is such as to excuse the exhaustion of the remedies afforded therein.<sup>53</sup> So also when the full penalty for resorting to the courts, under the rules of the order, that of expulsion, has been paid, the exhaustion of the remedies provided is not a prerequisite to the action.<sup>54</sup>

D. DEMAND AND REFUSAL. — 1. Generally.<sup>71</sup> — A demand is sometimes required by statute,<sup>72</sup> or contract of the parties.<sup>73</sup>

In the absence of such express requirement, a demand is a condition precedent to an action when a demand is an integral part of the cause of action,<sup>74</sup> or when the duty to pay or do some act does not arise until after a demand,<sup>75</sup> unless the demand is excused for some fore the commencement of a purely statutory action (such as an action against a city for injuries resulting from a defective highway) is necessarily a condition precedent to the cause of action, because, the entire right of action being given by statute, it only comes into existence when the required notice has been given, but . . . a notice required to be given by statute prior to the commencement of an action to enforce a common-law right . . . is necessarily a statute in the nature of a statute of limitations, because the right exists without the aid of any statute." Meisenheimer v. Kellogg, 106 Wis. 30, 81 N. W. 1033; Relyea v. Tomahawk Paper & Pulp Co., 102 Wis. 301, 78 N. W. 412, 72 Am. St. Rep. 878, followed in Malloy v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 109 Wis. 29, 85 N. W. 130. (2) Where the legislature which gives a right of action declares it can be exercised only on condition that within 90 days after the cause of action arose, the plaintiff should give notice, this is a condition precedent to the right of action, the nonperformance of which takes away the cause of action. Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Wagner, 167 Fed. 75, 84, 92 C. C. A. 527.

Demand Against Subsequent Purchasers or Possessors.—Many courts hold that a demand is not necessary before action brought against a purchaser of the property from one without title, even where he has purchased in good faith,<sup>95</sup> though some courts hold otherwise.<sup>96</sup> But one who purchases with knowledge and with notice,<sup>97</sup> or who subsequently sells the property or otherwise converts it to his own use,<sup>98</sup> may be sued without a demand.

Principal and Agent.—Before a principal can recover money received by his agent in the course of his agency, a demand is generally required.<sup>99</sup>

4. On Breach of Conditions Subsequent in Deeds.—The mere breach of a condition subsequent in a conveyance of freehold does not divest the estate.<sup>1</sup> And therefore before an action for recovery of the premises could be brought at common law, the forfeiture must have been consummated by a re-entry.<sup>2</sup> Under the modern practice, an actual re-entry is not required as a general rule,<sup>3</sup> but some equivalent act,<sup>4</sup> such as a demand for the premises or notification that the grantor is claiming them,<sup>5</sup> is necessary before an action can be brought to recover the premises. By the weight of modern authority the bringing of an action of ejectment,<sup>6</sup> or an action to quiet title and compel a reconveyance,<sup>7</sup> is equivalent to a demand or re-entry.<sup>8</sup> And in some states a right of entry merely is sufficient to sustain the action.<sup>9</sup>

B. COMMENCEMENT AS FIXING RIGHTS AND DEFENSES.—1. Generally.—The plaintiff in an action at law must recover, if at all, upon his right of action as it exists at the institution of the suit.<sup>83</sup>

Defenses.—At common law matters of special defense arising after commencement of the action and before plea must be pleaded to the further maintenance of the action,<sup>84</sup> and cannot be pleaded in bar generally.<sup>85</sup> If such matter arises after plea it must be pleaded puis darrein continuance.<sup>86</sup> But in actions on the case, defenses admissible under the general issue are provable although they arise subsequently to the bringing of the action.<sup>87</sup> The same is true in trespass where the distinction between the two forms of action is abolished.<sup>88</sup> In defamation suits too, a retraction and apology made after commencement of the suit may be set up in mitigation of damages in some states.<sup>89</sup> In equity, it has been held that the defendant may, in his answer, avail himself of matters arising between the bill and answer.<sup>90</sup> The code

ment,<sup>99</sup> or by a supplemental pleading showing accrual of the cause of action after action brought.<sup>1</sup> In some states, however, the action is not abated because prematurely brought, but the plaintiff is charged with the costs already accrued.<sup>2</sup>

In equity, it has been held that the relief administered is such as the facts existing at the close of the litigation demand,<sup>3</sup> or at least, a failure to present facts arising subsequent to the commencement of the suit by supplemental bill is not reversible error.<sup>4</sup>

And in admiralty, on an allowance of costs, an action which has accrued in the meantime may be allowed to stand.<sup>5</sup>

An action is not premature because it is brought in violation of an agreement to forbear bringing suit,<sup>6</sup> or because the plaintiff is not ready to try the case when it is brought.<sup>7</sup>

b. Action Premature in Part.—In an action involving separable claims, the right to try those which have accrued is not affected by the fact that the action is premature as to others.<sup>8</sup>

c. Objections, Waiver and Cure.—Prematurely in bringing suit is not a jurisdictional matter, and does not render void a judgment on an obligation not due at the commencement of the action but due belaw will not bar the action,<sup>31</sup> unless it covers the statutory period,<sup>32</sup> or unless the doctrine of estoppel can be invoked.<sup>33</sup> In equity suits, however, delay amounting to laches precludes relief.<sup>34</sup>

D. HOW AND WHEN ACTION IS COMMENCED.—1. Generally.—A suit or action is commenced when the power or authority of the court is invoked by the plaintiff in some appropriate manner.<sup>35</sup>

Suits by the government are governed by the same rules as suits between private persons, when determining the time of their commencement.<sup>36</sup>

2. At Common Law.—The usual rule, in the absence of statute, is that an action is begun by the suing out of the writ with the intention of having it served,<sup>37</sup> the date or teste of the writ being regarded as the time of commencement.<sup>38</sup>

3. In Equity.—The first step in bringing a suit in equity is to file a petition or bill.<sup>39</sup> This in common parlance is denoted the commencement of the suit;<sup>40</sup> and it governs in a majority of the cases because there is no delay in issuing and serving the subpoena.<sup>41</sup> But it has been held that so far as it relates to the defendant, the suing out of a subpoena is the commencement of the suit,<sup>42</sup> and that for the purpose of tolling the statute of limitations the delivery of the writ must be followed either by a service thereof or by a bona fide attempt to

4. Under Statute. — a. Generally. — The time when actions are deemed commenced and the manner of their commencement are generally regulated by statutes in the various states.<sup>48</sup> Not only do the statutes differ considerably, from each other, but the time when an action is deemed to have been commenced may vary for different purposes.<sup>49</sup> With occasional modifications, the statutes fall into three general classes,<sup>50</sup> providing either that the action is commenced by the filing of a declaration, petition, or complaint,<sup>51</sup> or by the issuance of pro-

c. Attempt To Commence.—As against the defense of the statute of limitations, an attempt to commence the action by delivery of the process to the officer with the intention that it be served, is sometimes declared to be equivalent to the commencement of the action.<sup>67</sup>

d. On Appearance of the Defendant.—If service of process is essential to the commencement of suit, but is not made, the date of the appearance of the defendant, should he appear, and not the date of the process previously issued is the time of commencement.<sup>68</sup>

e. Where There Are Several Parties.—Where there are several parties defendant, statutes sometimes provide that the action is deemed commenced as to each at the date of the summons which is served on him,<sup>69</sup> or on a co-defendant who is a joint contractor or is otherwise united in interest with him.<sup>70</sup>

h. As Affected by Sufficiency of Process.—Where an action is deemed commenced by the issuance<sup>85</sup> or service<sup>86</sup> of process, the action is not deemed commenced if the process is void, but it is otherwise if it is defective merely and not void.<sup>87</sup>

i. As Affected by the Sufficiency of the Complaint.—Although the complaint or petition may be defective in form,<sup>88</sup> may designate the defendant by the wrong name,<sup>89</sup> or by a fictitious name,<sup>90</sup> or may defectively present a valid cause of action,<sup>91</sup> the filing thereof, if in time for the commencement of an action upon the cause stated, and the issuance of process when required by the local practice, constitutes

[a] Provided the Defect Is Cured by Amendment.—Henderson v. Beggs (Tex. Civ. App.), 207 S. W. 565.

[b] And any amendments which merely supply the omitted allegations relate back to the original pleading. Clark v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 38 Mont. 177, 99 Pac. 298. And see cases cited supra, this note.

[c] Effect of Omission of Allegation.—Conceding it is necessary to allege a particular matter in order to state a good cause of action, this is but one of the essential elements thereof and does not of itself constitute a complete cause of action apart from the other allegations, so that an omission to allege it results merely in "defectively stating a cause of action." Motsenbocker v. Shawnee Gas & E. Co., 49 Okla. 304, 152 Pac. 82, L. R. A. 1916B, 910. To same effect, see Neubeck v. Lynch, 37 App. Cas. (D. C.) 576, 37 L. R. A. (N. S.) 813.

[d] "Where there is no attempt to state a new cause of action in an amended complaint, but merely the addition of matters essential to make the original cause of action complete, the amendment, though made after the expiration of the period of limitation, relates back to the time of the commencement of the action." Ruiz v. Santa Barbara Gas & E. Co., 164 Cal. 188, 194, 128 Pac. 330.

[e] The contention that the rule would allow the filing of any sort of a document designated as a complaint to arrest the running of the statute, even a blank is without foundation as the courts are competent to say whether an alleged pleading is or is not a complaint. "Whether there may not be a distinction between a complaint which merely omits some formal allegation, or is imperfect of statement, and one from which it clearly appears that the plaintiff has no cause of action, or has filed what the court would say is no complaint at all, even though a general demurrer to either would be well taken," query. Clark v. Oregon Short Line R. R. Co., 38 Mont. 177, 180, 99 Pac. 298.

[f] A petition on a promissory note bad on general demurrer for want of an averment of ownership constitutes a sufficient commencement of the ac-states no cause of action whatsoever,<sup>93</sup> as when it lacks some averment essential to recovery,<sup>94</sup> the statute of limitations is not arrested, but continues to run until a sufficient amended pleading is filed.<sup>95</sup> But even in the latter states, if the omitted allegation is one which is cured by the verdict, the statute of limitations is tolled by the original pleading.<sup>96</sup>

j. Alias and Pluries Process.—Where the action is commenced by process, an alias or pluries writ is not the inception of a fresh suit,<sup>97</sup> where the original is continued by the further process without break or interval.<sup>98</sup> But under some circumstances, the issuance of an alias is the commencement of the action.<sup>99</sup>

k. Where Amendments to Pleading and Parties Are Made. Where a new cause of action is set up by way of amendment the action as to that cause of action is deemed commenced when the amended pleading is filed.<sup>1</sup> But amendments merely curing defects in the original proceeding and not setting up new causes of action relate back to tion to toll the statute, and the amendment supplying the omission relates back. Killebrew v. Stockdale, 51 Tex. 529. See McCamant v. McCamant (Tex. Civ. App.), 203 S. W. 118.

25. United States v. Oregon Short

A case may sometimes partake of the nature of both civil and criminal actions,<sup>26</sup> and certain proceedings are sometimes deemed to be civil and sometimes criminal.<sup>27</sup>

To determine whether an action is civil or criminal, the court should look not so much to the method of procedure to be followed as to the end to be attained.<sup>28</sup> The form of proceeding is not necessarily determinative, as a civil action may in form be a criminal proceeding, or vice versa.<sup>29</sup> Neither the fact that the action is brought in the name of the state,<sup>30</sup> nor the fact that the judgment may be enforced by the arrest and detention of the person,<sup>31</sup> is conclusive of the criminal nature of an action.

Change of Form. — A criminal action cannot be converted into an action for damages.<sup>32</sup>

3. Abolition of Distinctions.—The distinction between actions at law and suits in equity is still preserved in many state courts,<sup>53</sup> and by the federal courts.<sup>54</sup> But the statutes in some states abolish the distinction between legal and equitable procedure.<sup>55</sup> And the codes in many states expressly provide that the distinction between actions at law and suits in equity is abolished.<sup>56</sup> And even in the absence of such an express provision, it has been held the same result is accomplished by a provision that there shall be but one form of action.<sup>57</sup>

Abolition and Recognition of Common-law Forms.—Statutes have sometimes abolished the distinctions between certain of the common-law forms of action.<sup>61</sup> The codes have expressly done so,<sup>62</sup> and in Texas the common-law forms of action were never introduced.<sup>63</sup>

Effect of Mistake or Error as to Form.—At common law, a mistake or error of a party as to the proper form of action is fatal if properly objected to.<sup>64</sup> It is ground of abatement,<sup>65</sup> and of demurrer,<sup>66</sup> and advantage may be taken of it under the general issue,<sup>67</sup> or by motion for nonsuit.<sup>68</sup> But if no objection is made, the error is generally cured by the verdict,<sup>69</sup> although some cases have held it ground for arrest,<sup>70</sup> or for reversal on appeal.<sup>71</sup>

to which class a particular action belongs,<sup>78</sup> and frequently the same facts will sustain either class of action.<sup>79</sup>

The character of the action, whether ex contractu or ex delicto, must be determined solely from the pleadings.<sup>80</sup> This question must be determined from the allegations of the complaint together with the nature of the relief demanded,<sup>81</sup> and if it appears that a contract is the gravamen of the action, it will be so determined.<sup>82</sup> Neither the

In a general way a tort is distinguished from a breach of contract in that the latter arises under an agreement of the parties, whereas the tort ordinarily is a violation of a duty fixed by law, independent of contract or the will of the parties, although it may sometimes have relation to obligations growing out of or coincident with a contract, and frequently the same facts will sustain either class of action (*Rich v. [a] An equitable action even now must be maintained upon equitable equitable relief an equitable cause of action or defense must appear in the pleadings.<sup>8</sup>

The change effected by the code extends only to the form of action and pleadings,<sup>9</sup> or to the method of enforcing the substantive rights of the parties.<sup>10</sup> The distinctions as to the manner of bringing actions,<sup>11</sup> as to the manner of bringing the defendant into court,<sup>12</sup> and as to the form and manner of obtaining relief<sup>13</sup> are abolished, and the statutes relating thereto apply to all classes of actions.<sup>14</sup> The technical distinctions involved in the common law rules of pleading, the old forms of action, are abolished,<sup>15</sup> and one form of action is substituted,<sup>16</sup> so that now every action is in effect a special action on the case.<sup>17</sup> Likewise under most codes, there is no such thing technically as a legal or equitable action. In either case the proceeding is a civil action.<sup>18</sup>

From this it follows, that the formal and technical allegations required at common law are dispensed with,<sup>19</sup> the plaintiff needs only allege the facts relied on for recovery in ordinary language, and demand such relief as he deems himself entitled to.<sup>20</sup> As the form of action is immaterial,<sup>21</sup> the party cannot be said to have mistaken his form of action.<sup>22</sup> And if his complaint states facts which entitle him to any relief whether it be legal or equitable, the pleading will not be dismissed because he prays for relief to which he is not entitled.<sup>23</sup>

[a] A party cannot be sent out of court (1) because his facts entitle him to relief at law, or relief in equity as the case may be. He can only be sent out of court when he is entitled to no relief either at law or in equity. Walsh v. McKeen, 75 Cal. 519, 17 Pac. 673; Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514, 99 Am. Dec. 423. (2) But where, because the complaint makes a case for equitable relief, the case is set for trial at the equity term and is tried without

In granting relief, the court must look to the substance<sup>24</sup> rather than to the form of the action,<sup>25</sup> and must pronounce such judgment as the facts require whether it be legal or equitable, or ex contractu or ex delicto.<sup>26</sup>

The right to a trial by jury does not exist in actions for equitable relief even under the code.<sup>27</sup>

Effect on Rules as to Variance. — The code has not rescinded the rule that the allegations and proof must correspond,<sup>28</sup> or that the judgment must follow the pleadings,<sup>29</sup> except in so far as the strict common law rules on this subject may be affected by the abolition of forms of action.<sup>30</sup>

G. EQUITABLE AND LEGAL RELIEF IN SAME ACTION. — 1. Generally. At common law, equitable relief cannot be granted in legal actions,<sup>31</sup> but it is a familiar rule in equity that when it obtains jurisdiction it a jury, the complaint will be dismissed on failure to establish the equitable grounds for relief though the proof shows a legal cause of action, the plaintiff having refused to acquiesce in the suggestion that the case be sent to the law side for trial. Loeb v. Supreme Lodge, 198 N. Y. 180, 91 N. E. 547. See 5 STANDARD PROC. 358, note 24, and the title "Variance and Failure of Proof." (3) However, in Conaughty v. Nichols, 42 N. Y. 83, where the complaint after alleging facts showing a right of action on contract, concluded with the allegation "and have converted the same to their own use to the damage," etc., it was held that failure to prove a conversion did not justify a nonsuit. "It does not follow that, because the parties go down to the trial upon a particular theory, which is not supported by the proof, the cause is to be dismissed, when there are facts alleged in the complaint, and sustained by the evidence, sufficient to justify a recovery upon a different theory or form of action. There is no substantial reason why, under such circumstances, a party should be turned out of court and compelled to commence a new action." Compare 5 STANDARD PROC. 357, note 23, et seq.

will administer complete relief, even to the extent of awarding legal relief.<sup>32</sup> In a civil action under the code, the court may award such relief, both legal and equitable, as the facts alleged and proved require,<sup>33</sup> except in so far as the constitutional right of trial by jury would thereby be infringed.<sup>34</sup> But the facts alleged must warrant the particular relief prayed for.<sup>35</sup>

[a] "Any facts constituting a defense under the rules of equity or at law may be pleaded in a civil action." Kenny v. McKenzie, 25 S. D. 485, 494, 127 N. W. 597.

[b] An equitable defense is "any state of facts which would entitle the defendant, in a proper case, to the reformation of an instrument, or which would, under the former practice, if set up in a bill for that purpose, invoke the aid of a court of chancery for relief against the claim or title put forward by the plaintiff." East v. Peden, 108 Ind. 92, 94, 8 N. E. 722.

[c] Under the head of equitable defenses are included all matters that would before have authorized an application for relief against a legal liability, but which at bar could not be pleaded in bar. Kelly v. Hurt, 74 Mo. 561; Dobson v. Pearce, 12 N. Y. 156, 1 Abb. Pr. 97, 62 Am. Dec. 152.

[d] Such facts as formerly would support an injunction against further prosecution may be set up. Washburn v. Lee, 128 Wis. 312, 107 N. W. 649.

[e] Thus in an action on a judgment, fraud or imposition in the recovery of the judgment may be set up. Dobson v. Pearce, 12 N. Y. 156, 1 Abb. Pr. 97, 62 Am. Dec. 152.

[a] A statute authorizing the defendant to set forth as many defenses as he may have, does not permit equitable defenses in actions at law. Cohn v. Wemme, 47 Ore. 146, 81 Pac. 981.

[b] The equitable defense necessitates the filing of a complaint in equity in the nature of a cross-bill. Watson v. McLench, 57 Ore. 446, 110 Pac. 482, 112 Pac. 416; Beacannon v. Liebe, 111 Ore. 443, 5 Pac. 273. See infra, IV, G, 2, d.

Necessity of Asking Affirmative Relief.—As a general rule the defendant may plead his equities merely as a defense to defeat the action.<sup>49</sup> He may in a proper case ask affirmative relief by way of counterclaim,<sup>50</sup> and there are authorities holding that in certain cases affirmative relief must be asked for, when necessary to defeat the action,<sup>51</sup> as when a reformation of the contract sued upon is necessary.<sup>52</sup> This latter rule has been applied to ejectment cases where the pleading of the equitable matter merely by way of defense may forever keep the

50. See supra, this section.

51. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. McKeigue, 126 Wis. 574, 105 N. W. 1030.

[a] "The true and logical rule doubtless is that where facts are relied on which in equity simply defeat the plaintiff's cause of action and go no further, they may be set up by equitable defense . . . but in those cases where the action at law can only be defeated by virtue of an affirmative judgment by a court of equity, such for instance as the reformation of a contract sued on at law, the equitable defense must be made by way of counterclaim. In a word . . . facts which call for affirmative relief in favor of the defendant before the plaintiff's action can be defeated must be set up by counterclaim." Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. McKeigue, 126 Wis. 574, 105 N. W. 1030.

[b] It may be doubted whether the construction of the statute so as to require a prayer for affirmative relief is not too strict to subserve the purposes of the code. East v. Peden, 108 Ind. 92, 8 N. E. 722.

52. Syenite Trap Rock Co. v. Williams, 167 App. Div. 774, 153 N. Y. Supp. 74; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. McKeigue, 126 Wis. 574, 105 N. W. 1030. Compare Rogers v. Castle, 51 Minn. 428, 53 N. W. 651.

[a] When a mistake in a written instrument is relied on, the answer should pray for affirmative relief. King v. Enterprise Ins. Co., 45 Ind. 43; Conger v. Parker, 29 Ind. 380. But compare 19 STANDARD PROC. 833, note 25, [a], and East v. Peden, 108 Ind. 92, 8 N. E. 722; Rogers v. Castle, 51 Minn. 428, 53 N. W. 651.

[b] But a mistake in a deed whereby the lands sued for were not included in the deed may be set up without praying a reformation. The same facts entitling the defendant to a reformation establish his equitable right to the possession and would as effectually defeat the action as would the legal title. King v. Dugan, 150 Cal. 258, 88 Pac. 925; Meeker v. Dalton, 75 Cal. 154, 158, 16 Pac. 764; Hoppough v. Struble, 60 N. Y. 430, 434.

legal and equitable title separate,<sup>53</sup> although it has been held to the contrary, especially where by lapse of time or for any other reason, the right to a decree of affirmative relief to the defendant, is lost.<sup>54</sup>

c. Necessity of Interposing Defense.—Although there is authority to the contrary,<sup>55</sup> it is generally held that equitable defenses must be pleaded when permitted by law,<sup>56</sup> and that they cannot be urged afterwards as a ground for enjoining the judgment.<sup>57</sup> It has been held, however, that this rule applies only where the party has an absolute right to set up the defense, and not where it rests in the discretion of the court.<sup>58</sup> Of course, to be availed of in the action, the defense must

53. See infra, this note.

[a] In an ejectment suit by the holder of the legal title, (1) a defendant who holds under a contract of purchase must set up his equitable defense by way of counterclaim and obtain specific performance of his contract, for if allowed to set it up by way of defense merely, the legal title and possession might be kept forever separate. A mere judgment that the plaintiff take nothing would be inconsistent with the pleadings as the answer admits the legal title of the plaintiff. Dewey v. Hoag, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 365; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. McKeigue, 126 Wis. 574, 105 N. W. 1030; Weld v. Johnson Mfg. Co., 86 Wis. 549, 57 N. W. 378; Lawe v. Hyde, 39 Wis. 345; Dupont v. Davis, 35 Wis. 631; Lombard v. Cowham, 34 Wis. 486. See Sutton v. Sutton, 60 Neb. 400, 83 N. W. 200 (defendant may show he is the equitable owner and entitled to affirmative relief). (2) The rule has been incorporated in a statute in Wisconsin. Wis. Sts. 1898, §3078.

[b] But the omission of a prayer is waived when the ground of defense is clear and the parties go to trial without objection. Cythe v. La Fontain, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 186, 194.

[c] The rule is peculiar to ejectment and does not affect the rule as to actions generally that equitable matters purely defensive may be pleaded by way of defense. "Mr. Pomeroy, in his work on Code Remedies (4th ed.) at sec. 29 seems to have thought that the rule laid down in these cases applied to all actions; but this is plainly an erroneous idea." Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. McKeigue, 126 Wis. 574, 578, 105 N. W. 1030.

54. Arguello v. Bours, 67 Cal. 447, 450, 8 Pac. 49.

[a] In California, a perfect equity, united to the possession is equivalent for all purposes of defense to a legal title. And the "defendant may plead, as a defense to 'ejectment' that he is in possession under a contract of purchase, the conditions whereof have been fully performed on his part." *Meeker v. H. UNDER THE CIVIL LAW.—Under the civil law in Louisiana actions are divided into civil and criminal actions.<sup>64</sup> Civil actions are divided into real, personal and mixed actions.<sup>65</sup> Personal actions are grounded on one of four causes which give rise to personal obligations, namely, contracts, quasi contracts, offenses and quasi offences.<sup>66</sup> Real actions are subdivided into petitory and possessory actions.<sup>67</sup> A hypothecary action is a real action which the creditor brings against the property which has been hypothecated to him by his debtor in order to have it seized and sold for the payment of his debt.<sup>68</sup>

[a] "The history of the question shows that it has at different times and by different authorities been resolved in three distinct ways. First, it has been considered that the private wrong and injury has been entirely merged and drowned in the public wrong, and therefore no cause of action ever arose or could arise. Secondly, it was thought that although there was no actual merger, it was a condition precedent to the accruing of the cause of action that the public right should have been vindicated by the prosecutor of the felon. Thirdly, it has been said that the true principle of the common law is that there is neither a merger of the civil right, nor is it a strict condition precedent to such right that there shall have been a prosecution of the felon, but that there is a duty merged in the criminal offense,<sup>71</sup> nor suspended pending criminal prosecutions.<sup>72</sup> Certain traces of the common law rule still exist, however.<sup>73</sup>

VI. ACTIONS BASED UPON ILLEGAL AND IMMORAL TRANSACTIONS.<sup>74</sup> — A. GENERALLY. — It is a well-settled rule in equity,<sup>75</sup> as well as at law,<sup>76</sup> that no court will lend its aid to a party who founds his claim upon an immoral or illegal act.<sup>77</sup> No action can imposed upon the injured person, not to resort to the prosecution of his private suit to the neglect and exclusion of the vindication of the public law. In my opinion this last view is the correct one." Midland Ins. Co. v. Smith, 6 Q. B. Div. (Eng.) 561, 568.

[b] "The distinction between a void and valid new contract in relation to the subject matter of a former illegal one depends upon the fact whether the new contract seeks to carry out or enforce any of the unexecuted provisions of the former contract, or whether it is based upon a moral obligation growing out of the execution of an agreement which could not be enforced by law, and upon the performance of which the law will sue for money received by his agent in the course of the illegal transaction,<sup>2</sup> or a party to the contract may sue a depositary with whom money arising from the illegal contract has been deposited.<sup>3</sup>

D. RECOVERY OF MONEY PAID OR PROPERTY CONVEYED.—It is well settled that a party in pari delicto cannot maintain an action to recover money paid in pursuance of an illegal contract after the contract has been executed.<sup>4</sup> But where the contract is malum prohibitum merely, some courts hold that an action may be maintained independent of the contract, to obtain a restoration of money or property re-raise no implied promise." Express promises based upon the last class of considerations may be sustained. Gray v. Hook, 4 N. Y. 449, *quoted in Morrison v. [a] False Return.—(1) The return of the officer showing due execution of summons cannot be contradicted by a plea in abatement, unless it be shown that the plaintiff induced or procured it. Sutherland v. People's Bank, 111 Va. 515, 69 S. E. 341; Talbott v. Southern Oil Co., 60 W. Va. 423, 55 S. E. 1009. See also Tillman v. Davis, 28 Ga. 494, 73 Am. Dec. 786. (2) The rule is otherwise in some states (Electric Vehicle Co. v. Craig Toledo Motor Co., 157 Fed. 316). (3) In some cases that the defendant is privileged from service,<sup>32</sup> that the declaration fails to conform to process,<sup>33</sup> that there is a defect of or other objection to parties,<sup>34</sup> that another action is pending,<sup>35</sup> that the cause has been submitted to arbitration,<sup>36</sup> that the action was commenced without the consent of the plaintiff, and was discharged by him,<sup>37</sup> and that the plaintiff has recommenced an action previously dismissed without paying or securing the costs of the former suit.<sup>38</sup> A plea in abatement is sometimes permissible, where there is a misjoinder of causes of action.<sup>39</sup> The death of a party pending the action sometimes abates it.<sup>40</sup> But the insanity of a party pending suit does not.<sup>41</sup>

A plea to jurisdiction differs from a plea in abatement.<sup>42</sup>

That the plaintiff has a remedy in equity which would include the cause of action set up is not a matter of abatement.<sup>43</sup>

The accidental destruction of the plaintiff's pleadings after service of process does not abate the suit, where the loss can be supplied.<sup>44</sup>

Matter amounting to a plea of res judicata should be pleaded in bar, not in abatement.<sup>45</sup>

A federal statute provides that the writ of injunction shall not be granted by any court of the United States to stay proceedings in any court of a state,<sup>82</sup> except in cases where such injunction may be authorized by any law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy.<sup>83</sup> This statute does not apply to injunction proceedings incidental to jurisdiction previously acquired by the federal courts,<sup>84</sup> or prevent it from restraining proceedings having the effect of defeating or impairing its jurisdiction,<sup>85</sup> or prevent it from enforcing its own judgments.<sup>86</sup> Nor does it apply to proceedings which have not in fact been commenced but which are threatened.<sup>87</sup>

C. AS AFFECTED BY STAGE OF PROCEEDINGS. — Equity has jurisdiction to enjoin prosecution of actions before the commencement of the proceedings,<sup>88</sup> pending the suit,<sup>89</sup> or after judgment,<sup>90</sup> and after its decision by the highest tribunal.<sup>91</sup> The defendant who has a distinct ground for equitable relief need not wait for the determination of an action at law,<sup>92</sup> unless his defense is purely equitable.<sup>93</sup>

D. SUBMISSION TO JUDGMENT AS A CONDITION TO RELIEF. — If the defenses set up in the bill are the same as those made in the action at law, or are such only as can be made in equity,<sup>94</sup> an injunction will

E. WHEN INJUNCTIVE RELIEF MAY BE HAD.—1. Generally.<sup>3</sup> There is no occasion for invoking the jurisdiction of equity to enjoin an action at law except when the courts of law are inadequate to give full relief.<sup>4</sup> To warrant an injunction some equitable ground of relief must exist.<sup>5</sup> But no general rule can be laid down as to when equity ought to exercise its injunctive power, as each case must be ruled by its own facts.<sup>6</sup> If these facts show that it is necessary and equitable to exercise the power in the orderly administration of justice, an injunction will be granted, otherwise not.<sup>7</sup> Or as it has been said, relief is granted on the ground that from equitable circumstances, it is against conscience that the party inhibited should proceed in the cause.<sup>8</sup> A person will be enjoined against taking an inequitable advantage of another by an action.<sup>9</sup> Accordingly the rule has been laid down, that missed, the decree should direct the judgment at law be set aside and the case reinstated as it was when the injunction was granted. Great Falls Mfg. Co. v. Henry's Admr., 25 Gratt. (66 Va.) 575.

in all cases where by accident, mistake or fraud or otherwise, a party has an unfair advantage in proceedings in a court of law, which must necessarily make that court an instrument of injustice, and it is, therefore, against conscience that he should use that advantage, a court of equity will interfere and restrain him from using the advantage which he has thus improperly gained.<sup>10</sup> The object therefore really is to prevent an unfair use being made of the process of a court of law, in order to deprive another party of his just rights or to subject him to some unjust vexation or injury which is wholly irremediable by a court of law.<sup>11</sup>

"The mere fact that a court of law if called upon to do so, might possibly exercise concurrent jurisdiction in such a case cannot defeat the jurisdiction of this court to interfere. If, indeed, the matter had been pleaded at law, and the court of law had entertained the plea and adjudicated upon it, the case might have been different; but it is clear that, in this case, the court of law has not entertained the question, and the bill was filed before the trial of the action."

jurisdiction,<sup>17</sup> except when the remedy by defense is inadequate or where appreciable injury would result from a denial of the injunction,<sup>18</sup> or when the party is entitled to relief which cannot be afforded by the court of law,<sup>19</sup> or where through fraud, accident or mistake or for some other reason unmixed with negligence or fault of the complainant or his agents, the party was prevented from presenting his defense.<sup>20</sup> Thus as the defenses of fraud,<sup>21</sup> want of consideration,<sup>22</sup> and of an equitable estoppel,<sup>23</sup> for example, are available in the action at law, they do not authorize an injunction unless special circumstances exist. [b] Thus, although a release is a perfect defense, it would not, in an action at law, prevent the injury that may result should the scandalous matters in the complaint be made public. 3. Where Equitable Relief Is Necessary.—a. Generally.<sup>25</sup>—If the case involves some equitable element which cannot be applied at law and which must be applied in order that complete justice may be done,<sup>26</sup> or if the case discloses that such relief as the party is entitled to cannot be afforded by the court of law,<sup>27</sup> equity will assume jurisdiction, withdraw the question from the law court, and enjoin the proceedings at law, even though the party may have a good defense at law. Thus where a surrender or cancellation of the instrument is sought and an irreparable injury will be suffered by a denial of the injunction, proceedings at law will be restrained, although the facts may constitute a defense to the law action.<sup>28</sup>

[b] "Perhaps the cases may all be reconciled on the general principle that the exercise of this power is to be regulated by sound discretion as the circumstances of the individual case may dictate; and that the resort to equity, to be sustained, must be expedient either because the instrument is liable to abuse from its negotiable nature, or because the defense, not arising on its face, may be difficult or uncertain at law, or from some other special circumstances peculiar to the case, and rendering a resort here highly proper and clear of all suspicion of any design to promote expense and litigation." Hamilton v. Cummings, 1 Johns.

b. Equitable Defenses or Counterclaims Not Available at Law. So also equity will enjoin actions at law when the complainant has purely equitable defenses not enforceable in the law action,<sup>29</sup> unless, it has been held, the equitable defense becomes of no importance because of another perfect defense to the action.<sup>30</sup> This rule, of course, has no application in those jurisdictions in which equitable defenses can be interposed in law actions.<sup>31</sup>

[a] The statute authorizes the defendant who is entitled to relief arising out of the facts requiring the interposition of a court of equity, and material to his defense, to file a complaint in equity. Oregon L. O. L. §390.

[b] The relief sought must operate as an entire or partial defense to the action at law. The mere fact that the defendant can state a cause of suit against the plaintiff entitling him to equitable relief is not sufficient to authorize filing the complaint. Davis v. First Nat. 48. Harrison v. McCrary, 37 Ala. 687.

[a] The reason is that a creditor at large or before judgment cannot enjoin the debtor from fraudulently disposing of his property. Harrison v. McCrary, 37 Ala. 687.

49. Gray v. Jones, 178 Ill. 169, 52 N. E. 941. But see Ward v. Callahan, 49 Kan. 149, 30 Pac. 176, injunction is a proper remedy to prevent sale of exempt property by probate court.

[a] The fact that the court is without jurisdiction or is exceeding its jurisdiction does not warrant equitable relief. U. S.—Walker v. Robbins, 14 How. 584, 14 L. ed. 552. Ala.—Birmingham Ry. & E. Co. v. Birmingham Traction Co., 121 Ala. 475, 25 So. 777. Mo.—St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 89 Mo. 146, 1 S. W. 208. Tex.—Jones v. Stallworth, 55 Tex. 138. But see Bokee v. Hamersley, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 461.

50. Lehman, Durr & Co. v. Shook, 69 Ala. 486; Hill v. Billingsley, 53 Miss. 111.

[a] A person having the legal title to the premises cannot enjoin an ejectment suit against him as this is a perfect defense. Shaw v. Chambers, 48 Mich. 355, 12 N. W. 486.

Vexatious ejectment suits repeatedly brought may be enjoined. See 20 STANDARD PROC. 80.

Actions involving relation of vendor and purchaser, see the title "Vendor and Purchaser."

[b] Mere apprehension that a law action will cast a cloud on title to real estate does not authorize an injunction. Edgell v. Clarke, 76 Miss. 66, 23 So. 358.

[c] Where a deed in the complainant's chain of title is lost, (1) he may invoke equity to ascertain its existence and enjoin an action of ejectment against him. Lash v. Butch, 4 Iowa 215. (2) But the loss of a justice's transcript does not authorize an injunction as it may be restored by motion in the law court. Clingman v. Hopkie, 78 Ill. 152.

[d] An action on the covenants contained in a defective deed is not an adequate remedy precluding relief. Segee v. Thomas, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 11, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,633.

[e] A nonresident without property in the state will be enjoined from suing for the purchase money when the title is defective. Richardson v. Williams, 56 N. C. 116; Green v. Campbell, 55 N. C. 446.

[f] Merely to compel payment of charges on the land before the plaintiff at law is let into possession, equity will not grant an injunction. Hill v. Billingsley, 53 Miss. 111.

51. U. S.—Camp v. Boyd, 229 U. S. 530, 33 Sup. Ct. 785, 57 L. ed. 1317. Ala.—Smith v. Spencer, 73 Ala. 299. Miss.—Hill v. Billingsley, 53 Miss. 111.

52. Clio v. Lee (Ala.), 74 So. 243; Hill v. Billingsley, 53 Miss. 111.

[a] But where the complainant has the legal title, an equitable estoppel is of no importance and does not cancellation of a deed apparently valid on its face is necessary,<sup>53</sup> and where no adequate remedy at law exists.<sup>54</sup>

12. Actions in Foreign Courts.—a. Generally.—If the averments of the bill make a proper case for enjoining proceedings in a domestic court, it authorizes an injunction against proceedings in a sister state.<sup>55</sup> Thus equity will enjoin suits in other states where there is fraud,<sup>56</sup> oppression,<sup>57</sup> vexation,<sup>58</sup> injustice, or unconscientious authorize an injunction. Shaw v. Chambers, 48 Mich. 355, 12 N. W. 486.

[b] Where a party knows that improvements are being erected on the premises, a party may be estopped to afterwards maintain ejectionment, and will be enjoined from doing so. South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Alabama Great So. R. Co., 102 Ala. 236, 14 So. 747, where a railroad constructed its tracks on complainant's land without previous condemnation proceedings.

[c] An ejectionment suit against a condemnor in possession under a void proceeding in condemnation will be enjoined to give effect to an estoppel by an acceptance of compensation. Clio v. Lee (Ala.), 74 So. 243, citing many cases.

53. Ala.—Lehman, Durr & Co. v. Shook, 69 Ala. 486. Mich.—McKibbin v. Bristol, 50 Mich. 319, 15 N. W. 491. N. Y.—Sieman v. Austin, 33 Barb. 9.

[a] When the prosecution of the other suit is contrary to equity and good conscience, and to the injury of others, an injunction will be granted. Federal Trust Co. v. Conklin, 87 N. J. Eq. 185, 99 Atl. 109.

[b] "On general principles equity will not interfere with the right of any person to bring an action for the redress of grievance—the right preservative of all rights—except for grave reasons, and on grounds of comity the power of one state to interfere with a litigant who is in due course pursuing his rights and remedies in the courts of another state ought to be sparingly exercised. . . . They must be very special circumstances that will justify this court in restraining the prosecution of an equitable action already pending in a court of such ample jurisdiction. I speak not of any limitation upon the power of this court, but upon the propriety of its exercise in the particular case. Its exercise is not to be properly based upon any theory that this court knows better how to do justice than the court of last resort of that commonwealth; that it can weigh evidence better or more justly apply to the facts any general principle of law or equity, nor upon the ground that this court recognizes different rules of law or of equity from those which obtain in the commonwealth." Bigelow v. Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelt. Co., 74 N. J. Eq. 457, 71 Atl. 153, quoted in Jones v. Hughes, 156 Iowa 684, 137 N. W. 1023, 42 L. R. A. (N. S.) 502.

[a] But see Greer v. Cook, 88 Ark. 93, 113 S. W. 1009, holding that the mere fact that the creditor sued in a foreign state for the sole purpose of advantage.<sup>59</sup> But mere convenience of the parties,<sup>60</sup> or the right of a party to be sued in the county of his residence,<sup>61</sup> or the fact that the party suing in the foreign state would secure some advantage which he would not have in the state of his residence,<sup>62</sup> does not authorize an injunction against proceedings in another state.

b. Evasion of Laws of Domicile.—Actions in foreign jurisdictions brought by a resident creditor against another citizen of the state for the purpose of evading the laws of the domicile will be enjoined.<sup>63</sup> vexation and oppression does not warrant an injunction as the remedy is for the malicious abuse of process.

[b] A suit in another state brought maliciously for the purpose of vexing and harassing another citizen and of interfering with or preventing the free administration of justice in the forum. Mason v. Harlow, 84 Kan. 277, 114 Pac. 218, 33 L. R. A. (N. S.) 234.

[c] After adjudication of an action in the courts of one state, an action involving the same matter brought in another state for the purpose of annoying, harassing and vexing will be enjoined when the plaintiff therein is insolvent. O'Haire v. Burns, 45 Colo. 432, 101 Pac. 755, 132 Am. St. Rep. 191, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 267, note.

But the power should be sparingly exercised,<sup>64</sup> and an injunction will not be granted on the mere ground that the court in which the injunction is sought recognizes different rules of law or equity than those obtaining in the other state.<sup>65</sup>

F. INJUNCTION AGAINST PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS. — 1. Enjoining the Pleading of Defenses. — When the remedy at law is inadequate, equity will restrain a defendant from setting up certain defenses in an action at law on the ground that it would be inequitable to permit them.<sup>66</sup> But in such case, it has been held, the plaintiff will be compelled to abandon the law action and file a new suit in equity.<sup>67</sup>

2. Evidence. — Equity will restrain the introduction of evidence in a suit at law, which, although legally admissible, is manifestly contrary to right and justice,<sup>68</sup> and in a proper case it will restrain the taking of a deposition.<sup>69</sup>

[a] Domicile of Parties.—In most cases, the party against whom the injunction was issued had either gone himself to the foreign jurisdiction or had sent his claim there for prosecution by his assignee, in order to evade some distinct prohibition of the local law of the common domicile. Bigelow v. Old Dominion Copper Min. & Smelt. Co., 74 N. J. Eq. 457, 485, 71 Atl. 153.

plcity of prosecutions.<sup>1</sup> There are two classes of cases embraced by this exception, first an injunction to prevent a multiplicity of prosecutions against one person, and second, to prevent a multiplicity against a number of persons.<sup>2</sup>

With respect to the first class, it is clear that an injunction will not be granted if the statute is valid.<sup>3</sup> And if the statute is of doubtful validity, the complainant cannot, by his wilful and repeated violation of its provisions, each furnishing separate grounds and depending upon separate facts, create this ground for equitable interposition without first settling the validity of the statute in the courts of law.<sup>4</sup> If he fears the prosecution of other suits, he can ordinarily refrain from the repetition of his acts in violation of its provisions until the proper forum has determined its invalidity.<sup>5</sup> Consequently, except when excused by the delay incident to the appeal,<sup>6</sup> a permanent injunction against repeated prosecutions against an individual for the violation of a statute will not be granted until after a determination in the law courts of its invalidity,<sup>7</sup> although a temporary injunction

With respect to the second class of cases, when a multiplicity of prosecutions under an alleged invalid statute or ordinance requiring the payment of taxes or license fees by persons in particular professions, etc., is threatened, equity will take jurisdiction, determine the validity of the statute or ordinance, and grant an injunction if the bill is sustained.<sup>9</sup> Some courts hold, however, that such prosecutions, although criminal in form are civil in nature, and the right to an injunction rests upon different grounds.<sup>10</sup>

I. DEFINITION AND NATURE. — A summary proceeding is one in which the ancient established course of legal proceedings is disregarded, especially in the matter of trial by jury, and, in the case of the heavier crimes, presentment by a grand jury.<sup>1</sup> As a general rule, such proceedings are statutory and not according to common law.<sup>2</sup> They are sometimes regarded as special proceedings,<sup>3</sup> but they are not actions,<sup>4</sup> although analogous to actions in purpose and scope.<sup>5</sup>

II. ILLUSTRATIONS OF. — Numerous proceedings are embraced within the term "summary proceedings,"<sup>6</sup> but they are allowed chiefly against defaulting officers and their sureties,<sup>7</sup> or in favor of sureties and against their defaulting principals or cosureties,<sup>8</sup> or against defaulting attorneys charged with the collection of money for their clients.<sup>9</sup> Summary proceedings include such matters as contempt proceedings,<sup>10</sup> summary proceedings to enforce liability on bonds,<sup>11</sup>

VI. PARTIES.—Summary proceedings against officers in some states are brought against the officer alone, and if the suretyship is proved, judgment is rendered against the sureties without notice to them.<sup>28</sup> Where a statute provides for summary proceeding against an officer and his sureties, proceedings will not lie against the sureties alone.<sup>29</sup> Some statutes authorize proceedings against the sureties alone after death of the principal,<sup>30</sup> or against the survivors after death of a surety.<sup>31</sup> Statutes authorizing summary proceedings in favor of and against a person do not extend to his personal representatives,<sup>32</sup> unless the statute so provides.<sup>33</sup>

VII. PLEADINGS, NOTICE, AND HEARING.—As a general rule, the defendant in summary proceedings must be given notice and an opportunity to be heard.<sup>34</sup> The proceeding is generally instituted either by motion supported by affidavits,<sup>35</sup> or, under some circum-

X. POSSESSORY WARRANT.—Statutes sometimes provide for a proceeding by possessory warrant, to recover possession of personal property in controversy which has been taken or carried away by fraud, violence or other means from plaintiff's possession.<sup>47</sup> The warrant<sup>48</sup> is issued on complaint on oath<sup>49</sup> to a judge in any county where the property may be found.<sup>50</sup> The only issue in such proceeding is that of possession.<sup>51</sup> If possession is awarded to the plaintiff, a forthcoming bond must be given.<sup>52</sup> Every decision on a possessory warrant may be reviewed on certiorari.<sup>53</sup>

XI. PROCEEDINGS AGAINST JOINT DEBTORS.—Some statutes provide that when a judgment is recovered against one or more of several joint debtors, those who were not originally served with summons, and did not appear, may be summoned to show cause why they should not be bound by the judgment in the same manner as though they had been originally served. The defendant may answer and the issues formed thereby may be tried as in other cases.<sup>54</sup> In some

Issuance and service of process, see infra, I, A, 2.

[b] The approval of an appeal bond is not judicial business within the meaning of a statute providing that "no court can be open, nor can any judicial business be transacted, on Sunday, or on any legal holiday." Deere, Wells & Co. v. Hodges, 59 Neb. 288, 80 N. W. 897.

nature. The matter has received legislative attention in most states;<sup>4</sup> the statutes in general adopt and reaffirm the common law rule,<sup>5</sup> but recognize exceptions thereto in cases where necessity or urgency would require the act to be done.<sup>6</sup> A statute prohibiting "judicial business,"<sup>7</sup> or forbidding a court to be open or to transact business,<sup>8</sup> does not, it has been held, prevent even judicial, as distinguished from ministerial, acts, if they are not performed by a court as such.

Executions, issuance on Sundays and holidays, see 15 STANDARD PROC. 755.

[c] The award of judicial writs is a judicial act and void if done on Sunday. But the issuing of original process . . . is merely ministerial. Com. Dig. 'Temps.' B. 3.

[d] Process issued by a ministerial officer is not "process awarded by a court" within the meaning of the common law prohibition against a court awarding process on Sunday. Clough v. Shepherd, 31 N. H. 490.

10. Valentine v. Roberts, 1 Alaska 536; Van Vechten v. Paddock, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 178, 7 Am. Dec. 303. See Goodlett v. Hansell, 56 Ala. 346, and 17 STANDARD PROC. 1012, note 2.

Issuance of process generally a ministerial act, see 21 STANDARD PROC. 692.

[a] The ground upon which it is considered a judicial act is that the awarding of a process is to be presumed to be done by the court whilst it is actually sitting. "This seems to be carrying a presumption or fiction of law to a great length, and cannot well be reconciled with the established rule that legal fictions are not to be permitted to work injustice, and to set aside proceedings, which but for the fiction or presumption would be legal and valid." Johnson v. Day, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 106.

11. Pa.—See the statutes, and service of process on Sunday was not illegal at the early common law,<sup>12</sup> it was in time forbidden by statute in England,<sup>13</sup> and comes within the implied or express prohibition of the Sunday laws in many,<sup>14</sup> but not all,<sup>15</sup> of the American states. Circumstances of necessity may justify the issuance and execution of writs and process on Sunday even in states where such acts would ordinarily be prohibited.<sup>16</sup>

13. Statute 29 Car. II c. 7 (1 St. at L., Rev. ed. 779).

[a] This statute is recognized as part of the common law (1) in some jurisdictions in our country (Valentine v. Roberts, 1 Alaska 536), but (2) not in others. Matthews v. Ansley, 31 Ala. 20; Hastings v. Columbus, 42 Ohio St. 585.

[a] Though regarded as a ministerial act it is forbidden in some states. Hauswirth v. Sullivan, 6 Mont. 203, 9 Pac. 798.

[b] Levy of distress warrant on Sunday, illegal. Mayfield v. White, 1 Browne (Pa.) 241.

[c] Execution of sequestration on Sunday, void. Foy v. Harper, 3 La. Ann. 275.

Levy of execution on Sunday has been declared void. 15 STANDARD PROC. 920.

[d] Service of summons on a state superintendent of insurance appointed by law as agent of a foreign corporation for purpose of receiving service of process, is not invalidated by a statute prohibiting transaction of business in offices of the state on holidays, for the reason that as regards the receiving of a summons, etc., the superintendent is the agent of the corporation, not the servant of the state. Flynn v. Union Surety & G. Co., 170 N. Y. 145, 63 N. E. 61.

[e] That publication in a Sunday newspaper does not constitute legal service see Colo.—Schwed v. Hartwitz, 23 Colo. 187, 47 Pac. 295, 58 Am. St. Rep. 221. Ga.—*Sawyer v. 15. Heisen v. Smith, 138 Cal. 216, 71 Pac. 180, 94 Am. St. Rep. 39; Hastings v. Columbus, 42 Ohio St. 585.

[a] "Judicial business" prohibited by statute on Sundays and holidays may be "somewhat broader in meaning than the expression 'judicial acts' used by Coke. But it can hardly be extended to the service of process, or other ministerial acts, and certainly not to the publication of service." Heisen v. Smith, 138 Cal. 216, 71 Pac. 180, 94 Am. St. Rep. 39, 41.

b. Criminal Process.<sup>17</sup> — The issuance of criminal, like that of civil, process, is a ministerial act and may be performed on Sunday.<sup>18</sup> Considerations of necessity and public policy, moreover, justify the execution of such process on Sunday,<sup>19</sup> and it is authorized both at common law and under the statutes.<sup>20</sup>

c. Notice and Other Papers. — Not only is the execution of process on Sunday made illegal in some states, but the prohibition extends as well to the service of notice and other papers.<sup>21</sup> But unless there is some statutory inhibition against the giving of notice on Sunday it may be done with the same effect as on other days.<sup>22</sup> has arrived at a verdict.<sup>31</sup> It may also in some states,<sup>32</sup> but not in others,<sup>33</sup> ascertain on Sunday the fact that the jury is unable to agree and forthwith order its discharge.

6. Judgment.—A judgment cannot be rendered,<sup>34</sup> nor entered<sup>35</sup> on Sunday, unless there is statutory authorization therefor.<sup>36</sup>

7. unless the statute forbids, a trial may be had on a holiday,<sup>44</sup> a jury instructed,<sup>45</sup> a verdict received,<sup>46</sup> or a judgment rendered.<sup>47</sup> A statute which forbids judicial acts on a holiday has been held not to include the issuance of process,<sup>48</sup> a summons made returnable,<sup>49</sup> an indictment returned,<sup>50</sup> or a deposition taken<sup>51</sup> on such a day.

Service may be made on holidays in some jurisdictions only under exceptional circumstances,<sup>52</sup> as where the officer having the process believes that service cannot be made if delayed until after the holiday,<sup>53</sup> and in such a case it must be made to appear, in the manner prescribed by statute, that the case was within the exception.<sup>54</sup>

II. ACTIONS ON SUNDAY CONTRACTS.—A. RETURN OF CONSIDERATION.—Statutes in a number of states provide that in an action upon a contract executed on Sunday, the defense that it was so executed may not be interposed until the defendant has returned such consideration as he may have received under the contract.<sup>55</sup>

B. PLEADING.—1. Anticipating Defense.—It is not necessary that the complaint anticipate the defense that the contract sued upon was executed on Sunday.<sup>56</sup>

2. Plea or Answer.—Where a contract made on Sunday is wholly void, the defendant may, in some jurisdictions, avail himself of this defense even though he does not set it up in his answer,<sup>57</sup> while in others the rule is that, in any aspect of the case, the defense that the ther than is specified in the statute. A. G. Spalding & Bros. v. Bernhard, 76 Wis. 368, 44 N. W. 643, 20 Am. St. Rep. 75, 7 L. R. A. 423. See also Deere, Wells & Co. v. Hodges, 59 Neb. 288, 80 N. W. 897; Glenn v. Eddy, 51 N. J. L. 255, 17 Atl. 145, 14 Am. St. Rep. 684.

contract sued upon was executed on Sunday is, like infancy,<sup>58</sup> a special defense which must be specially pleaded.<sup>59</sup> Where a return of the consideration received is a necessary prerequisite to a defense of the illegality of the contract,<sup>60</sup> the plea must show that the consideration has been returned.<sup>61</sup>

III. PENALTIES.—A. IN GENERAL.—The penalty imposed in a number of states upon persons violating the Sunday laws<sup>62</sup> is recoverable in an action<sup>63</sup> or other proceeding provided by law for the purpose.<sup>64</sup> Where the statute provides a criminal as well as a civil remedy against one who violates the Sunday law, it is not necessary to pursue the former to conviction before resorting to the latter.<sup>65</sup>

B. JOINDER.<sup>66</sup>—Under a statute prohibiting under penalty the employment of persons on Sunday and making it a separate offense for each person so employed, the plaintiff may maintain one suit for several penalties incurred by defendant through the employment of several persons on Sunday,<sup>67</sup> and in such case he cannot be compelled to elect which of the several causes he would prosecute.<sup>68</sup>

C. PETITION OR COMPLAINT.—Facts rather than conclusions must be alleged,<sup>69</sup> which will bring the case within the provisions of the statute.<sup>70</sup> Should these facts reveal that the act performed was a work of necessity within the meaning of an exception to the statutory inhibition, the petition is demurrable.<sup>71</sup>

COMPLAINT.<sup>72</sup> — In charging the offense of violating the Sunday laws each element which the statute makes a part of the offense must appear,<sup>73</sup> but more than this is not required,<sup>74</sup> it being usually sufficient to follow the language of the statute creating the offense.<sup>75</sup> It is imperative that it affirmatively appear that the act complained of was performed on a Sunday,<sup>76</sup> but the date of the particular Sunday need not be given,<sup>77</sup> other than that it must appear that it is within the statute of limitations.<sup>78</sup> Venue of the offense must appear.<sup>79</sup> The necessity for negating exceptions depends upon the general rules elsewhere treated,<sup>80</sup> and upon the local statutes and the various interpretations given them, being considered necessary in some states,<sup>81</sup> and unnecessary in others.<sup>82</sup> Clerical and grammatical errors will not invalidate an otherwise sufficient charge.<sup>83</sup> A criminal intent is seldom an element of the offense and need not be averred.<sup>84</sup>

B. TRIAL. — Whether or not the accused performed an act within the inhibition of the statute,<sup>85</sup> or whether such act was within one of the exceptions thereto,<sup>86</sup> is for the jury to determine.

I. DEFINITION AND NATURE.—A. SUPERSEDEAS.—The term supersedeas is a comprehensive one,<sup>1</sup> and includes the prevention as well as the setting aside or annulling of an act.<sup>2</sup> Usually, however, the remedy is of an injunctive or prohibitive, rather than a corrective character.<sup>3</sup> A supersedeas may be either express or implied; the former with or without writ.<sup>4</sup> A writ of supersedeas is a common-law writ,<sup>5</sup> to suspend the execution of a judgment.<sup>6</sup> In modern times the term is often used synonymously with a stay of proceedings,<sup>7</sup> and is employed to designate the effect of an act or proceeding which of itself suspends the enforcement of a judgment.<sup>8</sup> In some states the

[a] “The Term Supersedeas Is a Comprehensive One.—Sometimes it is express in its commands, at others only so by implication. In the first, when the person to whom it is directed, is commanded from the doing of an act therein mentioned; or if the act has already been done, to annul it as far as possible. In the second, it only suspends without annulling acts done before its issuing, and which before were lawful. . . . Almost every writ, whether it be of error, habeas corpus, prohibition, and the like, are, in their nature and effects to some extent writs of supersedeas.” Ex parte Woods, 3 Ark. 532, 538.

[b] “A supersedeas, properly so called, is a suspension of the power of the court below to issue an execution on the judgment or decree appealed from; or, if a writ of execution has issued, it is a prohibition emanating from the court of appeal against the execution of the writ.” Hovey v. McDonald, 109 U. S. 150, 159, 3 Sup. Ct. 136, 27 L. ed. 888.

3. Craig v. Stansburg (Cal. App.), 174 Pac. 404.

4. 9 Bacon's Abr. 274.

[a] Express supersedeas without writ is where a person who has, pursuant to an authority vested in him, made an order for the doing of an act, does, by a second order, forbid the doing of the act. 9 Bacon's Abr. 274, 275.

5. Fryer v. Austill, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 119.

6. Mabry v. Ross, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 769.

[a] Originally a writ of supersedeas was a writ directed to an officer commanding him to desist from enforcing the execution of another writ which he was about to execute or which might come into his hands. Dulin v. Pacific Wood & Coal Co., 98 Cal. 304, 33 Pac. 123; Tyler v. Presley, 72 Cal. 290, 13 Pac. 856; State v. Small, 49 Ore. 595, 90 Pac. 1110.

[b] It is a mere formal notice deriving its efficacy from the order under which it issued. Welch v. Jones, 11 Ala. 660.

[c] As applied to review on appeal, the writ of supersedeas is an auxiliary process designed to supersede the enforcement of a judgment brought up by writ of error for review. Williams v. Bruffy, 102 U. S. 248, 26 L. ed. 135; Dulin v. Pacific W. & C. Co., 98 Cal. 304, 33 Pac. 123.

[d] In Kentucky, the code defines a supersedeas to be a written order signed by the clerk commanding the appellee and all others to stay proceedings on the judgment or order. Gardner v. Continental Ins. Co., 31 Ky. L. Rep. 69, 101 S. W. 911.

[e] The proper function of the writ is to stay proceedings merely. McMinnville & M. R. Co. v. Huggins, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 217.

[f] There must be something in the course of execution, to suspend which the writ is awarded. Mabry v. Ross, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 769.

7. Dulin v. Pacific Wood & Coal Co., 98 Cal. 304, 33 Pac. 123; State v. Small, 49 Ore. 595, 90 Pac. 1110. Compare Montgomery v. King, 125 Ga. 388, 54 S. E. 135, it is not synonymous with stay of proceedings.

[a] It is a statutory remedy in modern practice. Sage v. Central R. R. Co., 93 U. S. 412, 23 L. ed. 933.

8. Dulin v. Pacific Wood & Coal Co., 98 Cal. 304, 33 Pac. 123; State v. Small, 49 Ore. 595, 90 Pac. 1110.

writ is unknown, though equivalent proceedings are provided for.<sup>9</sup> In others the supersedeas is a substitute for writ of error<sup>10</sup> or audita querela.<sup>11</sup> Although frequently ancillary to certiorari or writ of error,<sup>12</sup> supersedeas may be originally remedial, in some states.<sup>13</sup>

By implication, every writ is a supersedeas by which, although no writ of supersedeas has issued thereupon, the doing of an act is prevented.<sup>14</sup>

B. A STAY OF PROCEEDINGS has been defined to be a temporary suspension of the regular order of proceedings in a cause by direction or order of court.<sup>15</sup> It is distinct from an injunction by order,<sup>16</sup> and from an order enlarging the time to answer or plead;<sup>17</sup> but is much like an order granting a continuance.<sup>18</sup>

II. STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.—A. POWER OF COURT.—Courts have inherent power to stay proceedings in causes pending before them.<sup>19</sup>

B. WAIVER OF RIGHT TO STAY.—The right of a party to a stay may be waived by conduct inconsistent with a recognition of the right.<sup>20</sup>

C. GROUNDS.—1. Generally.—Proceedings may be stayed in a

[a] The writ is only allowed when (1) the court is of the opinion that the decision complained of ought to be reviewed. The court's action on the application is a determination whether or not the record presents a sufficient question for the consideration of the court. Williams v. Bruffy, 102 U. S. 248, 26 L. ed. 135. (2) It is the proper remedy only where error is apparent on the face of the record. Wingfield v. Crenshaw, 3 Hen. & M. (13 Va.) 245.

great variety of cases.<sup>21</sup> Thus proceedings may be stayed until necessary parties are brought in,<sup>22</sup> until a cross-bill may be heard,<sup>23</sup> and when the cause of action is frivolous,<sup>24</sup> or when an attorney brings an unauthorized suit.<sup>25</sup> Actions which are not brought in good faith<sup>26</sup> or which are vexatious,<sup>27</sup> may be stayed. And payment of the debt sued on and costs sometimes authorizes a stay of proceedings.<sup>28</sup>

jurisdiction of the court.<sup>92</sup> Consequently proceedings in disregard of it are irregular merely,<sup>93</sup> but not void.<sup>94</sup>

Termination.—A stay pending another action terminates on its final determination,<sup>95</sup> and a stay until further order of court expires by its own limitation on a denial of a permanent stay.<sup>96</sup>

K. PENDING BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS.—An adjudication in bankruptcy does not deprive the trial court of jurisdiction<sup>97</sup> or supersede its proceedings.<sup>98</sup> An order granting a stay is essential to stay proceedings.<sup>99</sup>

The federal bankruptcy statute provides that a suit which is founded upon a claim from which a discharge would be a release, and which is pending at the time of the filing of a petition against him, shall be stayed until after an adjudication or the dismissal of the petition; and if such person is adjudged a bankrupt, such action may be further stayed until twelve months after the date of such adjudication, or, if within that time such person applies for a discharge, then until the question of such discharge is determined.<sup>1</sup>

4. From What Court and in What Action Stay Issues.<sup>39</sup>—Generally it is only in the court from which,<sup>39</sup> and in the action in which the execution issued,<sup>40</sup> that a stay of execution can be granted. But after removal of the cause, the reviewing court may order a stay,<sup>41</sup> though not after it has remanded the cause.<sup>42</sup>

5. Length of Stay.—The stay of execution may be either temporary<sup>43</sup> or perpetual,<sup>44</sup> depending upon the grounds upon which it is based.

6. Grounds.—The grounds for issuing a supersedeas or stay of execution must rest generally, it has been held, on facts occurring subsequent to the decree.<sup>45</sup> A stay may be granted where an execution has issued improperly,<sup>46</sup> and, it has been held, where a levy is made on realty before personalty is exhausted.<sup>47</sup> But mere inconvenience to the debtor,<sup>48</sup> or irregularity in the judgment,<sup>49</sup> does not authorize a stay.

7. Proceedings To Procure Stay.<sup>60</sup>—Any statutory regulations relating to stays of execution should be complied with.<sup>61</sup>

Generally the stay may be obtained on motion,<sup>62</sup> or petition,<sup>63</sup> supported by facts sufficient to move the discretion of the court.<sup>64</sup> Notice to the adverse party should be given,<sup>65</sup> so that he may resist the application.<sup>66</sup> The court may require the party obtaining the order to enter into an undertaking,<sup>67</sup> and should require it except in cases where the ultimate satisfaction of the judgment is otherwise assured.<sup>68</sup> In some states a stipulation as to the preservation of the lien is required.<sup>69</sup>

On its own motion, the court may order a stay in some cases.<sup>70</sup> order should be served,<sup>72</sup> and if made with a view to a motion, must be accompanied with a notice of motion.<sup>73</sup>

9. Vacation, Modification and Review.—An order staying execution may be vacated,<sup>74</sup> and may sometimes be reviewed on appeal,<sup>75</sup> or by mandamus.<sup>76</sup>

10. Effect of Stay.—The effect of a stay of execution is substantially the same as the effect of a stay or supersedeas pending proceedings for review.<sup>77</sup> The force and effect of the judgment is not impaired.<sup>78</sup> Writs of execution and proceedings issued and had thereon in violation of the stay are regarded as voidable merely,<sup>79</sup> and may be set aside on proper application.<sup>80</sup> As to executions already issued the stay suspends the running of the time during which it may be executed.<sup>81</sup> The lien of the execution is not affected,<sup>82</sup> but in some states levies already made are released.<sup>83</sup> If a levy has not been made before the granting of the stay, other creditors may seize the defendant's goods.<sup>84</sup> The right to a review of the action by appellate proceedings is not waived by the taking of a stay of execution,<sup>85</sup> unless should direct a levy to be made and preserve liens. In re Sturges' Appeal, 86 Pa. 413.

D. IN CRIMINAL CASES. — 1. In General. — There is a clear distinction between the suspension of the imposition of a sentence and the suspension or remission of the enforcement or execution of a sentence already imposed.<sup>87</sup>

2. At Early Common Law. — At early common law the courts had discretionary power, especially in capital cases, to grant reprieves in exceptional cases to prevent abuses of their process and to prevent irreparable injustice from being done to defendants.<sup>88</sup>

3. Under Modern Practice. — a. In the Absence of Statute. — The authorities are irreconcilable in their reasoning and conclusions as to the power of a trial court to indefinitely suspend a sentence imposed upon a defendant in a criminal case.<sup>89</sup> According to some authorities, a trial court has inherent power in the absence of statute providing otherwise,<sup>90</sup> to stay the execution of a sentence in a criminal case, in whole or in part,<sup>91</sup> and for a definite,<sup>92</sup> or for an indefinite period<sup>93</sup> of time, whether the defendant consents to it or not.<sup>94</sup> When the suspension is upon conditions expressed in the judgment, the prisoner has a right to rely upon such conditions, and so long as he complies therewith the suspension will stand.<sup>95</sup> But when the suspension is without express conditions, it is within the power of the court on its own<sup>96</sup>

in its judgment that the imprisonment of the defendant shall begin at some future indefinite time, depending upon the happening of a contingency.<sup>6</sup> The changes in the criminal law have rendered unnecessary the early judicial power of reprieve,<sup>7</sup> and the exercise of such power would infringe the powers of the executive.<sup>8</sup> It has been held, however, that a judgment with a proviso that no execution issue is distinguishable from a suspension of execution of sentence.<sup>9</sup>

Effect of Invalid Order of Stay. — According to some authorities, an invalid order of stay does not avoid the original judgment,<sup>10</sup> and in the absence of a request to be taken into custody, will be presumed to have been consented to by the defendant,<sup>11</sup> and, therefore, if there is no statute to the contrary,<sup>12</sup> the defendant, if at liberty, may be rearrested as an escape and ordered into custody upon the executed judgment.<sup>13</sup> Other authorities hold that after an unauthorized order indefinitely suspending execution the court cannot issue a warrant for the defendant's arrest, after the expiration of the time for imprisonment.<sup>14</sup>

cases.<sup>15</sup> Some of these statutes are construed to give the court absolute power of suspension,<sup>16</sup> and irregularities in the court's action do not invalidate the order of suspension, when the court acts under the statute and within its limits.<sup>17</sup>

(II.) Probation.—Some statutes authorize the court to suspend the execution of sentence,<sup>18</sup> for such period of time as the statute prescribes or allows,<sup>19</sup> upon such terms and conditions as it shall determine, and to place the defendant on probation and under the charge and supervision of a probation officer during such suspension.<sup>20</sup> The order of suspension is an operative judgment of the court,<sup>21</sup> and so remains until revoked or modified by an order regularly made,<sup>22</sup> and consequently the issuance of a commitment without an order of revocation or modification is improper,<sup>23</sup> and the defendant will be released on habeas corpus.<sup>24</sup> The suspension of the execution is inconsistent with its execution; and upon revocation of the suspension, the duration of the probation is not to be counted in reduction of the sentence.<sup>25</sup> But when the defendant has fulfilled the conditions of his probation for the entire period thereof, which cannot, under statute, exceed the maximum possible term of sentence, the power of the court to enforce the original judgment is at an end.<sup>26</sup>

V. SUPERSEDEAS OR STAY PENDING APPEAL. — A. IN CIVIL CASES. — 1. Generally.<sup>47</sup> — A supersedeas pending appeal, as already defined, is a suspension of the power of the court below to issue execution on the judgment appealed from, and a prohibition against the execution of the writ if final process has issued.<sup>48</sup> Under the common law of England a writ of error operated as a supersedeas and stayed all action of the inferior court, without an undertaking or other security;<sup>49</sup> but by statutes of James I., and Charles II., security was required in numerous classes of cases specified therein.<sup>50</sup>

Under the English chancery practice an appeal has the effect of wholly suspending all proceedings in the court below on the decree appealed from,<sup>51</sup> but later, it was decided that an order of the chancellor or of the appellate court was essential.<sup>52</sup> In the absence of specific statute some American equity courts followed the early rule of the English equity practice,<sup>53</sup> whereas others followed the later rule.<sup>54</sup> And furthermore in cases in which the statute regulating the subject omits to make provision for a stay in a particular case and when necessary to preserve the status quo, pending appeal, a stay or supersedeas may be had by order of court.<sup>55</sup>

Generally.*—The subject of supersedeas and stay of proceedings on error or appeal is generally a matter of statutory regulation under the modern practice in the United States.<sup>56</sup> Supersedeas or stay, under the statutes, is generally a matter of right, on compliance with the provisions of the statute,<sup>57</sup> except in certain actions specifically excepted from its operation, such as unlawful detainer suits,<sup>58</sup> and in those cases not covered by the statute.<sup>59</sup>

the judgment directs the execution of instruments, execute and deposit the instrument with the clerk to abide the appeal.<sup>76</sup> A cost bond on appeal is insufficient to operate as a stay,<sup>77</sup> except under statutes which provide for a stay upon the perfection of an appeal by giving such a bond.<sup>78</sup>

(2.) Combining Different Kinds of Bonds in One Instrument. — The ordinary cost or appeal bond and the bond to stay execution may be combined in one instrument.<sup>79</sup> So may the different kinds of stay bonds required by the different classes of cases embraced in the judgment or order appealed from.<sup>80</sup>

When a judgment is against an executor or guardian or other person acting in another's behalf, in his representative capacity,<sup>85</sup> some statutes dispense with a stay bond,<sup>86</sup> or authorize the giving of a limited bond,<sup>87</sup> whereas others authorize the court to dispense with or limit the security in such case.<sup>88</sup>

(C.) REQUISITES OF BOND.—The supersedeas or stay bond should follow the language of the statute,<sup>89</sup> and must identify with certainty the decree appealed from,<sup>90</sup> and the cause in which it is rendered.<sup>91</sup> It must be in a sufficient amount,<sup>92</sup> payable to the obligee designated by law,<sup>93</sup> conditioned as prescribed by statute,<sup>94</sup> and with the number of competent obligors prescribed by law.<sup>95</sup>

The condition of the bond varies with the nature of the judgment or order to be stayed.<sup>96</sup> Generally the bond must be conditioned to prosecute the appeal or writ of error with effect,<sup>97</sup> and to perform the judgment of the appellate court against the appellant,<sup>98</sup> and pay all damages and costs awarded against him.<sup>99</sup> Where the statute

But it has been held that where the statute provides for the approval of the bond, as by the clerk of the court, an approved bond, though defective and insufficient, is not a nullity and operates as a supersedeas until its insufficiency has been determined by a direct attack.<sup>31</sup> And where a writ of supersedeas is issued, the respondent

c. Stay Under Federal Statute.—The federal statute provides that the defendant may obtain a supersedeas by serving the writ of error, by lodging a copy thereof for the adverse party in the clerk's office within a specified time and giving the security required by law on the issuing of the citation.<sup>41</sup> Or the writ having been served within that time, a stay may be had as a matter of favor by giving the required security afterwards.<sup>42</sup> In case of appeals, the appeal must be taken and allowed and security given within the same time as on writs of error.<sup>43</sup> The rule is the same on error from the United States supreme court to a state court.<sup>44</sup> The issuance of a writ of supersedeas is not required,<sup>45</sup> except under special circumstances,<sup>46</sup>

it may be delivered to the sheriff by a third person.<sup>72</sup>

4. Necessity for Appellate Proceedings.— Unless statute provides otherwise a supersedeas cannot be allowed except as an incident to an appeal actually taken or a writ of error actually sued out.<sup>73</sup> But an appeal operates as a supersedeas for the time being even though taken to an appellate court having no jurisdiction to entertain it.<sup>74</sup>

5. Who May Obtain Supersedeas or Stay.— As a general rule, it may be stated that none but parties or privies can procure a supersedeas.<sup>75</sup> A party to a decree is not entitled to a supersedeas of any feature of it which does not affect his interests.<sup>76</sup> Though several parties join in a writ of error, a less number may file stay bonds, the supersedeas in such case operating only as to those who file the proper bond.<sup>77</sup>

6. What Judgments and Orders May Be Stayed.— a. Judgments of What Court.— In addition to judgments of courts of general jurisdiction,<sup>78</sup> statutes relating to appeals and supersedeas authorize a stay of proceedings on judgments of justices of the peace,<sup>79</sup> and of intermediate appellate courts<sup>80</sup> pending appeal.

the proceedings are not stayed until the issuance of a writ of supersedeas,<sup>24</sup> or, if a review on error is sought, until the filing of a petition in error in the appellate court.<sup>25</sup> The stay operates until the final determination or remanding of the appeal,<sup>26</sup> or the dismissal of the writ of error,<sup>27</sup> unless the statute provides otherwise.<sup>28</sup>

8. Vacation and Modification of Supersedeas.—An order granting a stay of execution is subject to the control of the court in which the proceeding is pending,<sup>29</sup> and may be vacated<sup>30</sup> or modified.<sup>31</sup> After the case has been transferred to the appellate court, it has exclusive jurisdiction of proceedings to vacate the supersedeas.<sup>32</sup> The supersedeas may be vacated on motion,<sup>33</sup> in term as well as in vacation,<sup>34</sup> and even at a subsequent term.<sup>35</sup>

Grounds.—If after acceptance of the surety, the circumstances of the case, of the parties or of the sureties is changed so that the security becomes insufficient, on application, the appellate court may so order as

e. Effect on Execution Already Issued. — At common law an execution already issued is not recalled, by a supersedeas;<sup>75</sup> the levy is not released ipso facto;<sup>76</sup> and the sheriff may proceed to sell the property.<sup>77</sup> But under modern statutes, the supersedeas suspends further proceedings on the execution,<sup>78</sup> generally letting things already done remain in statu quo,<sup>79</sup> although some statutes require the clerk to countermand the execution,<sup>80</sup> and even provide that property levied on is released.<sup>81</sup> A distinction between levies on personal and real property is sometimes made.<sup>82</sup>

B. IN CRIMINAL CASES.—The question of supersedeas in criminal cases, and that of bail are independent matters.<sup>10</sup>

In the absence of statute, a writ of error upon a judgment in a criminal case does not operate as a supersedeas,<sup>11</sup> unless it is so ordered or indorsed on the writ.<sup>12</sup> But the appellate court has power to grant a stay independent of statute.<sup>13</sup>

In the modern practice, however, statutes generally, if not universally, regulate stay or supersedeas pending appeal and writ of error in criminal cases.<sup>14</sup> These statutes differ considerably. It is sometimes provided that an appeal by the state does not stay the operation of a judgment in favor of the defendant.<sup>15</sup> As to stay or supersedeas pending proceedings for review taken by the defendant, some statutes variously provide that an appeal by the defendant or the issuance of a writ of error stays execution of the judgment,<sup>16</sup> or that an appeal or liance upon the decree then in force, no supersedeas bond having been filed, his rights cannot be divested by a subsequent reversal of the decree. Creighton v. Keith, 50 Neb. 810, 70 N. W. 406; State v. Ramsey, 50 Neb. 166, 69 N. W. 758.

all other cases only on filing a certificate that there is probable cause for appeal.<sup>22</sup>

To procure a stay, no security is required,<sup>23</sup> except where the statute requires it.<sup>24</sup> Some statutes provide for both a stay on bond and a stay without bond, requiring the defendant to be confined in the county jail in the latter case until disposition of the appeal.<sup>25</sup>

The supersedeas suspends the sentence of imprisonment until the determination and remand of the appeal.<sup>26</sup> Pending the stay, the sheriff, on being served with proper notice, must keep the defendant in custody without executing the judgment and detain him to abide the judgment on appeal,<sup>27</sup> unless he is admitted to bail.<sup>28</sup> If the execution of the judgment has commenced before the supersedeas became effectual, further execution is suspended, and upon service of a proper certificate or notice, the defendant must be restored to his original custody.<sup>29</sup>

VII. STAY PENDING CERTIORARI. — A. GENERALLY. — At common law and in the absence of statute, a writ of certiorari operates by its own inherent force as a supersedeas and stays execution of the judgment to be reviewed,<sup>34</sup> without any special order to that effect.<sup>35</sup> It is nevertheless proper to insert a special clause in the writ, directing it to so operate,<sup>36</sup> and directing a special writ of supersedeas to the sheriff, if necessary.<sup>37</sup> And under some statutes a certiorari does not operate as a stay in the absence of this clause, or a separate order to that effect.<sup>38</sup>

Pending an application for a writ of certiorari, the court may, under proper circumstances, stay proceedings,<sup>39</sup> and the statute sometimes provides for a stay.<sup>40</sup>

not annul the proceedings or the process in the hands of the officer.<sup>49</sup> Any proceedings not inconsistent with the dormant status of the judgment may be taken.<sup>50</sup> The writ of certiorari does not prevent action on an execution already begun to be executed,<sup>51</sup> unless a writ of supersedeas be directed to the officer.<sup>52</sup> In some states, however, the supersedeas releases levies made on personalty,<sup>53</sup> but not those on realty.<sup>54</sup> And where a bond has been given to secure plaintiff's judgment it had been held that the lien of a previous attachment is thereby dissolved.<sup>55</sup>

Who Is Bound. — It binds not only the court and the parties to whom it is directed,<sup>56</sup> but also, it has been held, all concerned in the matter who have notice of its issuance.<sup>57</sup>

Proceedings after notice of the issuance of certiorari are irregular,<sup>58</sup> and even void it has been held.<sup>59</sup>

I. NATURE, PURPOSE, AND NECESSITY. — A. GENERALLY. Supplemental pleadings had their rise and development chiefly in the practice of the equity courts.<sup>1</sup> They are pleadings<sup>2</sup> introduced after the original pleadings have been filed to bring before the court new and material facts relevant to the case, which it was not within the power of the parties to take advantage of in their original pleadings or by amendment, either because, the new facts thus sought to be interposed in the case were not discovered in time, or because of their subsequent occurrence.<sup>3</sup> Such supplemental pleadings are not independent

In modern practice the amendment has usurped some of the former functions of the supplemental pleading, and, in some jurisdictions, has entirely supplanted it;<sup>12</sup> the office of the supplemental pleading is now frequently restricted to introducing only such matters as have occurred since the institution of the suit, and not, as formerly, of also bringing in facts occurring before but not known till after the original pleadings were filed.<sup>13</sup> But even where supplemental pleadings have been abolished the general rules regarding them are applied to amendments which perform the same function.<sup>14</sup> The purpose of supplemental pleadings ordinarily is not to supply defects in the original pleadings,<sup>15</sup> which should, where possible, be done by amendment,<sup>16</sup> but is to

B. STATUTES AND RULES. — Although they had their rise and development in the equity courts, in many states where by statute legal and equitable procedure has been combined into one system, supplemental pleadings have received express statutory authorization or have been embodied in court rules.<sup>20</sup> Such statutes, with varying limitations, not only embody the principles long observed in chancery practice with respect to supplemental pleadings, making them applicable to procedure at law as well as in equity,<sup>21</sup> but they also compound the practice governing the common law pleading of puis darrein continuance.<sup>22</sup>

In construing statutes allowing supplemental pleadings to be filed, the courts, in order to arrive at a correct interpretation thereof, rely upon the practice established and followed by the equity courts prior to the passage of such legislation.<sup>23</sup>

In Texas supplemental pleadings seem to be different from the equity or code supplemental pleadings and may be filed only in response to the adversary's pleading, by way of exception, denial, or allegation of new matter in reply.<sup>24</sup>

[c] Distinction Between a Supplemental Answer and a Plea Puis Darrein Continuance.—(1) The general rule in actions at law was that the plea puis darrein was a waiver of all former pleas, and made the only issue to be tried in the action. This was not so, however, when the latter plea was not inconsistent with former pleas. In suits in chancery, on the contrary, a supplemental answer was never regarded as a waiver of the first answer. It was, as its name implied, an addition to the first answer. Slauson v. Englehart, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 198. See also Thatcher v. Rockwell, 4 Colo. 375, and supra, I, A, note 6. (2) A supplemental answer under the code differs from the plea puis dar- rein continuance in that the supplemental answer may be allowed on motion whenever the facts forming the ground of the answer have occurred since the answer was put in, or where the defendant was ignorant of them at the time of pleading the first answer, whereas the plea puis darrein continuance could strictly be pleaded only before or at the next continuance after the facts transpired. ## II. JURISDICTION AND LEAVE OF COURT TO ENTERTAIN SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS.—A. JURISDICTION.—

Under the reformed practice the jurisdiction of courts of equity to entertain supplemental pleadings has been by statute extended to the law courts.<sup>25</sup> As supplemental pleadings are a continuation of the original pleadings, no objection can be made to the jurisdiction of the court in which they are filed when that court is the one that assumed and properly had jurisdiction of the original pleadings.<sup>26</sup> And while it might seem that application could not be made in the appellate court, the contrary has been held.<sup>27</sup>

R. Co. v. Soutter*, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 609, 17 L. ed. 886. (2) And if the original suit is between citizens of the same state, a citizen of another state seeking to become a party to such suit by means of a supplemental pleading cannot have the suit removed from the state to the federal court. Hospes v. Northwestern Mfg. & Car Co., 22 Fed. 565.

[b] Where an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill sought to affect the title to land in another county from that in which the original pleadings were on file and all the parties to the new pleading were residents of the county in which the land was located, it was held that as the pleading was not a purely supplemental one and in continuance of the original pleadings it should be filed in the county where the subject matter and parties were located. McDonald v. Asay, 139 Ill. 123, 27 N. E. 929.

[c] Plea to the Jurisdiction.—"It is probable, I think, that, although it is now too late to raise the question as to the validity of the original proceedings and decree, the question of jurisdiction might be raised upon a supplemental bill, seeking to enlarge and extend the relief prayed, so as to include other property." *Mosgrove v. law or in a suit in equity.<sup>28</sup> A supplemental pleading filed without leave of court will be stricken from the files upon motion,<sup>29</sup> but under special circumstances the court may order such pleading to stand,<sup>30</sup> and it has been held that when the court declines to strike out a supplemental pleading filed without leave, such refusal is tantamount to leave.<sup>31</sup> The objection that service of a supplemental pleading was made without leave may be waived.<sup>32</sup> though this discretion must be exercised reasonably and without caprice.<sup>34</sup> It is generally true that the granting of leave is not a mere matter-of-course,<sup>35</sup> and the action of the court will depend somewhat upon the stage of the proceedings at which the application for leave is presented,<sup>36</sup> and whether the party knew or should have known the facts when he filed his original pleading,<sup>37</sup> or in time to have supplied them by amendment, where an amendment is permissible.<sup>38</sup> But doubt-

[b] Reasons for the Rule.—"Neither party has the right, after pleadings have once been filed, issue joined, and the case ready for trial, to change the issues by filing either an amended or supplemental pleading. This can be done only by leave of the court, and the granting of leave is within the discretion of the court. Error will lie only when an abuse of that discretion is shown. . . . It may be that, as supplemental pleadings embrace only subsequent facts, there can be fewer reasons for refusing to permit them to be filed; but still, like amended pleadings, they are within the control, and subject to the discretion, of the court." Brewer, J., in Clark v. Spencer, 14 Kan. 398, 19 Am. Rep. 96.

less, as held by some courts and strongly intimated by others, there are circumstances, as in case of material matters occurring after filing the original pleading and as to which he would be concluded by the judgment, where a party may have a substantial, affirmative right to file supplemental pleadings, provided that right has not been by any means forfeited;<sup>39</sup> and it is almost a matter of course to allow proper supplemental pleadings to be filed if application is promptly made and their allowance does not injure the other party.<sup>40</sup> In any event, if there is an abuse of discretion in granting or refusing leave the action of the court may, in most jurisdictions, be assigned as error and reviewed upon appeal.<sup>41</sup>

to file supplemental pleadings generally has been liberal to the applicant,<sup>53</sup> and ordinarily the court will not proceed to try the cause on such application,<sup>54</sup> but will examine the question only so far as to determine whether or not the pleading is sought to be injected into the proceedings for purposes of vexation and delay,<sup>55</sup> leaving the other party to his remedy by plea, answer, or demurrer if the supplemental pleading is filed without sufficient grounds,<sup>56</sup> though the latter may, it seems, oppose the application on the ground that the matter proposed to be pleaded is not proper subject matter for a supplemental pleading.<sup>57</sup> The mere leave to file a supplemental complaint decides nothing as to the plaintiff's rights,<sup>58</sup> and the order granting leave, even though made mature filing is not ground for denying leave to file.<sup>86</sup> The time of filing a supplemental pleading after leave granted, may be prescribed by the court.<sup>87</sup>

B. LACHES.—If the application for leave to file is not made promptly, or, at least, within a reasonable time after the supplemental matter occurs and comes to the knowledge of the applicant, his laches may in the discretion of the court justify a denial of leave.<sup>88</sup> As to what constitutes a reasonable time, no definite rule can be laid down, because the term "reasonable," as here used, is an intensely relative one depending upon the facts in the particular case.<sup>89</sup> If it appears that no party will be substantially injured, a mere delay in making a motion for leave to file a supplemental pleading will not in itself defeat the application,<sup>90</sup> but if laches apparently exists at the time of application a satisfactory showing must be made to the contrary.<sup>91</sup>

IV. WHO MAY FILE SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS.— Either party may file a supplemental bill,<sup>92</sup> but in a case where both the plaintiff and defendant may do so, preference will be given to the plaintiff's application.<sup>93</sup>

V. NUMBER OF SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS.— The necessity for filing more than one supplemental pleading depends upon the exigencies of the case and the discretion of the court.<sup>94</sup>

VI. MATTERS APPROPRIATE FOR SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS.— A. GENERALLY.— Since generally the purpose of supplemental pleadings is to reinforce and strengthen the original pleading, to which it is merely ancillary,<sup>95</sup> and not to correct vital defects in it,<sup>96</sup> or supply a new cause of action,<sup>97</sup> the facts set up must be material and germane to the case or defense set out in the original.<sup>98</sup> The practice in equity and under some codes and statutes permits the averment both of facts existing but not discovered before the filing of the original pleading and of facts subsequently occurring.<sup>99</sup> But under some statutes only the latter class of facts are a proper subject matter for supplemental pleadings.<sup>1</sup> A supplemental pleading, however, embodying such subsequently occurring facts, may also, with the court's permission, include matters which would have been appropriate subjects for amendment.<sup>2</sup> Supplemental matters that add nothing to

B. SUPPLYING VITAL DEFECTS IN ORIGINAL PLEADINGS.—1. Generally.—If the original pleadings are totally defective, in that they are wanting in equity or fail to state a cause of action, and there is no ground for proceeding upon them, they cannot be sustained or aided by filing supplemental pleadings founded upon new matter, whether the original pleadings were in a suit in equity or in an action at law.<sup>17</sup>

pleadings.<sup>19</sup> Thus where the exhaustion of legal remedies against other persons or property as by judgment and execution, is regarded as a condition precedent to the existence of a cause of action, if the action has been begun before such condition has been satisfied, it can not be supplied by supplemental pleading though the required judgment has been subsequently obtained.<sup>20</sup> The rule is otherwise, however, where such judgment and execution, though necessary as evidence of insolvency, are not regarded as essential parts of the cause of action.<sup>21</sup> Where notice of the claim or injury sued upon, as in actions against public corporations, is a condition precedent, it would seem that the same rule as to supplemental pleadings should be applied as in case of any other condition precedent.<sup>22</sup>

3. Title Subsequently Acquired.—If the title set up in the original pleading is wholly bad it cannot be remedied by a supplemental pleading showing the subsequent acquisition of title;<sup>23</sup> though this rule does not apply in the case of an inchoate or partial title, the subsequent strengthening of which may be set forth in a supplemental pleading.<sup>24</sup>

C. NEW CAUSE OF ACTION.—1. Generally.—Both under the chancery and code practice a new or independent cause of action cannot be introduced by means of a supplemental bill or complaint,<sup>25</sup>

As to what matters constitute strict conditions precedent the courts are not always agreed. See the title "Suits and Actions," and other titles dealing with particular matters.

[a] Necessity for Supplemental Bill or Original Bill in the Nature of a Supplemental Bill.—The right to introduce new parties, or to substitute one party for another, in equity, when there has been a change of interest pending the suit is well recognized. It is done either by a supplemental bill, or by an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill,—the former being applicable properly to those cases where the same parties or the same interests remain before the court, while the latter "is properly applicable when new parties, with new interests arising from events since the institution of the suit, are brought before the court." Ross v. Fort Wayne, 63 Fed. 466, 11 C. C. A. 288. See also to the same effect, Hazleton Tripod-Boiler Co. v. Citizens' St. R. Co., 72 Fed. 325; Tappan v. Smith, 5 Biss. 73, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,748.

[b] If a complainant, suing in his own right, parts with (1) less than his entire interest, or if he is deprived of his entire interest but he is not the sole complainant, the defect in either case may be supplied by supplemental bill. Ross v. Fort Wayne, 63 Fed. 466, 11 C. C. A. 288. (2) But if a sole complainant suing in his own right is deprived of whole interest, as in the case of bankruptcy, or if he assigns his whole interest to another, he is no longer able to prosecute the suit, for want of interest, and the assignee may be complainant in his stead; but, as the title of the latter may be litigated, the substitution must be accomplished by means of an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill. Ross v. City of Fort Wayne, supra.

[c] A person entitled to the benefit of a decree by acquiring an interest (1) in the subject-matter of the controversy subsequent to the decree is not entitled to invoke the aid of the court or take further action until he has made himself a party by supplemental bill and has brought in the representatives or successors in interest of the original parties plaintiff or defendant. Secor v. Singleton, 41 Fed. 725. (2) And if after final hearing and the direction of a decree in favor of the complainant, a third person succeeds to the interest of the complainant, such person cannot file a supplemental bill before the entry of the decree. Hazleton Tripod-Boiler Co. v. Citizens' St. R. Co., 72 Fed. 325.

34. Nevada Nickel Syndicate v. National Nickel Co., 86 Fed. 486. See Nat. Bank of Anadarko v. First Nat. Bank, 39 Okla. 225, 134 Pac. 866.

Bringing in new party by amend-

But supplemental pleading is not permissible merely to get rid of undesired parties to a suit.<sup>35</sup> If the matter introduced by supplemental pleading renders the further presence of certain parties unnecessary, it does not make the original pleading objectionable on this ground, but a motion to dismiss the action as to them is the proper remedy.<sup>36</sup>

2. New Process.—New process is necessary where new parties are brought in, but not for parties already before the court,<sup>37</sup> unless required by local rule or statute.<sup>38</sup>

VII. FORM AND CONTENTS.<sup>39</sup>—A. IN GENERAL.—Supplemental pleadings must be drawn in accordance with the ordinary rules applicable to pleadings generally.<sup>40</sup> The parties to the supplemental pleading would ordinarily remain the same as in the original,<sup>41</sup> unless new parties are added or substituted,<sup>42</sup> or the new facts render it necessary or desirable to dismiss as to some of the parties.<sup>43</sup> But in equity, where leave is given to file a supplemental bill to bring in parties wanting, the original defendants need not be made parties to it.<sup>44</sup>
